Truman Sees No Need for Changes in Atom Policy

Says a Little Soviet Cooperation Could Result in Assuring Peace to the World

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday took a stand against any new approach to Soviet Russia in connection with the atomic and hydrogen bombs.

If we could get just one little bit of cooperation from the Soviet government, he said, we could bring about a peaceful situation in the world.

Mr. Truman said that there was no reason for this country to change the Baruch Plan it proposed to the United Nations, calling for international ownership and operation of atomic plants and a system of international inspection. Russia vetoed that.

No Use Getting Steamed Up

Under a barrage of questions, inspired by developments connected with the H-bomb, the Chief Executive said there wasn't any use getting all steamed up. Every possible effort has been made to create a peaceful situation, he said, and recalled Russia's "No" votes in the United Nations.

Mr. Truman, facing reporters at a White House news conference, gave his hearty approval to Secretary of State Acheson's statement on Wednesday. Acheson said he saw no need of forming a group of private citizens to study problems growing out of the superbomb. He said the only way to get peace was to create strength in place of weakness in threatened areas of the world.

Mr. Truman flushed with anger at one stage in the White House news conference.

"Are you intending to say," asked Columnist Doris Fleeson, "that public discussion does no good?"

Told To Ask Directly

The Chief Executive told her that she needn't put any words in his mouth. He told her to ask a direct question, and said he would try to answer it.

"I thought I was asking one," said Miss Fleeson.

Mr. Truman, still irritated, told her a second time not to put words in his mouth.

"Do you think," Miss Fleeson then asked, "that public discussion will help any?"

Mr. Truman said that public discussion helps every situation, if it is done in a sane way.

The first question put to Mr. Truman at the press-radio conference had to do with the action of the Federation of American Scientists, which last week proposed that the President appoint a citizens commission which would study the problems growing out of the A-bomb and H-bomb and en-

National Airlines announced yesterday the Civil Aeronautics Board has approved the addition of two more "club coach" flights between New York and Miami, with stops in Washington.

The flights will begin on Feb. 18. It will be the first time the low cost (about four cents a mile) club coach service has been made available on north-south routes out of Washington.

The CAB approval extends until March 31.

[Rates between Washington and New York will be $8.60 compared with a standard rate of $13.40. To and from Miami, Washington passengers will pay $38.80 compared with standard fare of $62.50.

Post Gives Double Assist to Restore Ring to Owner

A valuable diamond ring, advertised in the lost and found columns of The Washington Post yesterday morning, was returned later in the day by a Post employe who found it.

The ring belonged to H. Mason Welch, 1831 Sudbury la. nw., an attorney. In his ad Welch said he had lost the ring "at or near 14th and New York ave. nw." Post Photographer Harry Goodwin found the ring on the sidewalk at the southwest corner of that intersection and located the owner through the ad.

He refused the reward Welch offered.

Maryland's Anti-Red Law Reinstated

Ober Law Put Back But Constitutionality Is Not Decided

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

Maryland's rigorous Subversive Activities Act, the Ober Law, was put back on the books yesterday by the State's highest court.

The Court of Appeals of Maryland ruled in Annapolis that opponents of the law "were crying before they were really hurt" and thus had no standing in court.

The court refused to rule on the constitutionality of the controversial law, which was declared unconstitutional in August by Circuit Court Judge Joseph Sherbow in Baltimore.

"We do not intimate that any of its provisions are valid or invalid," Judge William L. Henderson said in the majority decision.

Senator Karl Mundt (R., S. Dak.) last night hailed reinstatement of the Ober law as a "signal victory for the cause of freedom."

The Senator, author of a similar bill pending in Congress, termed the Ober law a "hard-hitting law against communism; it is as full of teeth as a crocodile's jaw."

As a result of the decision the law will remain in force at least until November, when the act is put to the voters in a referendum.

Tito Reportedly Asks Allen's Aid To Get U. S. Loan

Belgrade, Feb. 9 (U.P.).—Marshal Tito's Government has asked United States Ambassador George V. Allen to assist in getting 36 million dollars in new loans, a reliable source said today.

Hard-pressed for foreign currencies to buy machinery for industrialization and raw materials to keep existing factories operating, the Yugoslavs asked Allen's aid for three loan requests already submitted to the International Monetary Fund, the United States Export-Import Bank and the World Bank.

Chicago Will Get Movies in Homes By Television

Chicago, Feb. 9 (AP).—Zenith Radio got the green light today on trying out its plan for premium television shows on a pay-as-you-see basis.

The Federal Communications Commission in Washington okayed a 90-day test of the corporation's Phonevision system. No starting time has been set.

Zenith promptly signed a contract with Illinois Bell Telephone Co. and started negotiations with Hollywood studios.

It expects to transmit first-run movies at $1 a showing to 300 selected TV-equipped homes in North Side Chicago. These homes can receive the movies on Channel 2 if the phone company is notified by phone.

The company fixes it so the TV signal is unscrambled by an impulse sent over the telephone line.

Big, Rugged Men Most Likely To Get Coronary Thrombosis

Such men run the biggest risk of being struck down in their prime by coronary thrombosis, one of the most savage of the diseases of the heart.

This was the warning sounded tonight from the Massachusetts General Hospital after three years' research. And with the warning came a word of hope—hope that in the future such attacks can be forestalled because the body-type of the most-likely victims now is known.

Forewarned, such men may be helped to take steps against the disease which yearly blots out 125,000 to 150,000 American lives by blocking the artery which feeds blood to the muscles of the heart.

"Mesomorphic" males are its most frequent victims in middle life. The "ectomorphic" male—of light body build—was found least prone to it.

The good news in the announcement, according to Dr. Menard Gertler, director of the study, is the hope it holds for prevention of attacks. He cooperated with other eminent doctors and Harvard anthropologist Earnest A. Hooton on the research.

A few years from now, Dr. Gertler said, "we may be able to preselect persons who are particularly prone to coronary heart disease" and delay its onset.

By no means are all "mesomorphs"—men of athletic build—prone to coronary disease. But the studies established that "the frequency is higher in mesomorphs with a particular hormonal and biochemical makeup."

Aid Speeded For Non-Red Asiatic Areas

House Votes Funds For Korea, Formosa; Indonesia Gets Credit; Trade Help for Japan

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

The United States moved ahead on four fronts yesterday to improve economic conditions in non-Communist Asia.

All four steps were in line with the purpose Secretary Acheson announced on Wednesday—to create strength in those "situations of weakness" that now look tempting to Soviet power.

Yesterday's developments involved American support for Korea, Formosa, Indonesia and Japan, as follows:

1. By a vote of 240 to 134, the House authorized 60 million dollars of economic aid to Korea between now and June 30. This was a smashing reversal of the one-vote margin by which the House had rejected a similar bill on January 19.

2. In the new bill the House also authorized the continued spending of ECA funds in Formosa until June 30. The Foreign Affairs Committee has estimated that no more than $10,500,000 will be spent in this fiscal year, largely in rural improvements.

3. The Export-Import Bank prepared to announce a credit of 100 million dollars to the new United States of Indonesia, chiefly for railroad and communications equipment and other recovery supplies. This is expected to be the first installment of a big construction program which the bank is now considering.

Japan Invited to Open Offices

4. The United States invited the Japanese government to set up official agencies in New York, San Francisco, Los Angeles and Honolulu to foster Japanese trade, and has suggested that other countries do likewise. The four offices will also handle citizenship and property matters affecting Japanese nationals, although the staffs will not have diplomatic status.

Earlier this week the State Department had foreshadowed economic and military help for the three newly-recognized states of Indo-China. So it was more than ever apparent yesterday that the United States was determined to help non-Communist Asia, although nothing like an over-all program has yet emerged.

Officials felt that the House had made ample amends for the blow it struck the Administration in rejecting the original Korea bill. The "Voice of America" broadcasts to the Far East and elsewhere gave heavy play last night to the House vote, and especially to the 106-vote margin for continued aid.

Economy-minded Republicans, with the help of a few Southern Democrats, tried to slash 40 million dollars from the bill, but failed by an 81 to 54 vote. Later, as the House filled up, Republican and Democratic members of the Foreign Affairs Committee pleaded for decisive passage of the bill.

Representative Walter H. Judd (R., Minn.) reminded the House

Arnold Lines Win 5-Cent Fare Boost

2d Area Increase In 2 Days Okayed; 5 Zones Included; Effective March 1

By Judy Spivak
Post Reporter

An Interstate Commerce Commission examiner yesterday recommended that the Arnold Lines, serving nearby Arlington and Fairfax commuters, be granted a 5-cent cash fare increase on most of their inter-state fares.

The order will become final March 1 unless an exception is filed by some interested party.

It was the second major fare increase granted in the area within two days. The Maryland Public Service Commission on Wednesday approved a 2-cent-per-zone increase on Capital Transit lines to nearby Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties, effective February 19.

Zones 1 Through 5

Examiner J. J. Williams yesterday recommended that Arnold fares between the District and zones one through five, now ranging from 15 to 35 cents, be upped 5 cents each.

He also approved the bus line's request that tokens be sold 6 for $1, instead of 8 for $1 as at present.

However, the examiner ruled that fares from Washington to zone six, which includes the towns of Fairfax and Oakton, be maintained at their current 40-cent rate.

The Arnold Lines (known officially as the Washington, Virginia & Maryland Coach Co.) have not proposed any change in the current 10-cent fare between the District and the Pentagon, Navy Arlington Annex, and Arlington Farms.

Chairman Daniel A. Dugan indicated last night that the Arlington County Board will file an exception today.

"I have polled a majority," he said, "and they agree with me that such an increase is ridiculous in view of the service given to Arlington commuters.

"I don't begrudge the wage increases given the employes, and I suggest the raises be taken out of the $5000 a month Arnold pays himself for the use of his own garage rather than out of the pockets of the riders."

Yesterday's recommended increase would not affect intrastate travelers on the line.

Similar Increase Expected

However, chances that the Virginia State Corporation Commission will grant a similar 5-cent-per-zone increase were heightened yesterday by the ICC action. An SCC hearing on the matter has been continued until March 14.

The new 20-cent interstate cash fare between Washington and Zone 1 would affect the majority of about 74 percent of the bus line's passengers, who commute from nearby Arlington.

Cash fares to Zone 2, which includes outlying portions of Arlington, would be upped to 25 cents under the order.

Cash fares to Zone 3, which includes Falls Church, plus the sub-divisions of Jefferson Village,

District "crime busters" get guns and licenses to tote 'em

Issuance of special .38-caliber detective revolvers to two investigators for the special Congressional committee probing Washington crime was disclosed yesterday.

The committee sleuths who received the guns Tuesday from the Metropolitan Police Department on a loan basis are: Hyman Fischbach, committee counsel, and John Woog, staff investigator.

Fischbach said he requested the guns as a "precaution." Besides going into "dangerous' areas, Fischbach explained: "Naturally, we get our fair share of screwballs and crackpots and we have to see all comers."

Committee Chairman James C. Davis said he did not know in advance that the permits were being issued. He added, however, that he feels the police have done a service by providing the guns.

The two committee operatives refused to confirm a report they were threatened. Similarly, officials at police headquarters denied assigning a special detail of bodyguards to the men.

Davis, a former judge in Georgia, said that he has never felt any apprehension about crooks trying to get even with him for his official actions.

"An honest man engaged in the prosecution of criminals can prosecute them as vigorously as he knows how without ever needing to fear retaliation," Davis said.

The Congressman added that he was sure Fischbach agreed with him. Fischbach said he did agree.

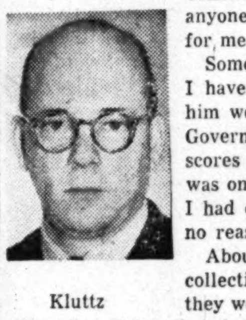
Reporter Tells of 'Investing' In Ambrose Stamp Operations

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

This is the story of how I became involved in what has turned out to be the fabulous stamp deals of Harold F. "Dusty" Ambrose, the former Post Office official. I was one of his "investors."

The disclosures of what postal officials believe was a "big-time confidence racket" are as big a shock to me as anyone else. More so, in fact. It's still hard for me to believe the stories are true.



Kluttz

Some background is pertinent at this point. I have known Harold—and I thought I knew him well—in the 12 years I've been writing a Government column. Harold had given me scores of good stories during that period. He was one of my best news sources. I liked him, I had confidence in him, and I had absolutely no reason to distrust this key postal official.

About two years ago I decided to start stamp collections for my three boys in the hope that they would get interested and learn from them. I had hoped, too, that their stamps would be of sufficient value by the time they reached college age to pay their higher education. It has been done.

I talked with Harold among others about my thought. In the end, he suggested that I purchase what I could of a special commemorative issue then on sale in the department. He said he had made purchases for his five children. Harold said he'd be glad

President's Board Starts Work on Its Fact-Finding Report; No Plan for Seizure

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

John L. Lewis was hit with a Federal injunction yesterday, and faced the prospect of being struck with a second, stronger injunction Saturday.

The first injunction would restrain Lewis from making four "illegal" demands on the operators; the second would order Lewis to send his striking miners back to work because of a "national emergency" arising out of a coal shortage.

Both court actions are aimed at getting 370,000 protesting miners back into the soft-coal pits, but there was no way of telling last night how effective the legal punches would be in getting the miners to produce coal.

Lewis has hinted, in a letter to President Truman, that injunction or no, the miners are not likely to dig coal unless and until they get a contract from the operators. President Truman told a press conference yesterday that he neither has the intention, nor the power, to seize the coal mines should the miners defy the court injunctions.

Outlook Worse Confused

Thus, the already confused outlook for a break or a settlement in the eight-month-old cold dispute appeared last night to be more confounded than ever—at a time when the coal-shortage pinch was beginning to affect seriously the operations of railroads, the steel industry, and the everyday activities of Midwestern communities.

Out of the welter of yesterday's sound and fury, the following situation emerged:

1. The President's fact-finding board abruptly gave up its brief attempt to resolve—or find an approach to resolving—the bitter dispute between Lewis and the coal operators through renewed collective bargaining with the fact-finders sitting in as observers.

2. The fact-finding board pushed ahead at high speed to draw up its report on the dispute and have it on the President's desk by Saturday, two days before the deadline Mr. Truman set.

3. Armed with the report, the President will be empowered under the Taft-Hartley Act to seek a "national emergency" injunction from the Federal court ordering the striking miners back to work for 80 days.

While the Chief Executive was waiting for the necessary report so that he could seek a "national emergency" injunction against

Virginia House Saves Nearby Rent Control

Votes to End Curbs With Exception of Areas Near District

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

Richmond, Feb. 9.—A last-minute effort to retain rent controls in the Virginia area near Washington and in Prince William County snowballed to victory in the House of Delegates today.

After more than an hour of lively debate, the House accepted, 52-36, a surprise amendment to a State-wide rent control repealer. The amendment was offered by Delegate Frank P. Moncure of Stafford.

The House moved the Boatwright bill to lift rent controls elsewhere in the State to position for passage Friday. But Moncure's amendment exempts Fairfax, Arlington and Prince William Counties and the City of Alexandria.

"The boys on the fringe," meaning the newer members of the House, were responsible for the victory, Moncure said afterward.

Nylon U. S. Flags Will Fly Over All Public Buildings

The Stars and Stripes are going to get a new look—nylon.

Government experts have decided that Old Glory will wave longer and prettier with a new, shiny dress of the man-made substitute for silk.

So, they said yesterday, they are going to start buying nylon flags to fly over most Federal buildings here and throughout the Nation, including the White House.

Ferdinand J. Kaufholz, chief engineer of the Public Building Service, said six months of testing show the nylon flags will last up to three times as long as the present cotton or wool ones.

You can not realize it, he said, but wool or cotton flags have to be repaired or replaced every 30 days.

House Votes End of Penny Postal Cards

Bill to Boost Revenue Half of Sum Asked By Truman Approved

By The Associated Press

The House voted yesterday to raise postal rates 130 million dollars a year—less than half the amount President Truman said is urgently needed to bring them in line with other prices.

The Senate still has to pass on the question.

The bill which the House approved by a voice vote calls for increases in every class of service except first class. Letters still could be sent for 3 cents an ounce, ordinary mail, 6 cents air mail.

The penny post cards would rise to 2 cents.

Second class mail, which includes newspapers and magazines, would pay 15 million dollars more annually; third class matter (circulars and similar matter up to 8 ounces) $25,600,000; fourth class (parcel post) 40 million dollars; registered mail four million dollars. Miscellaneous other services would provide the balance of the increase.

The Senate Postoffice and Civil Service Committee approved a postal rate increase bill of its own last year, but recalled it January 11, apparently wanting to see what the House was going to do. The Senate bill carried an estimated $102,260,000 increase.

House Committee Hears Plea For D. C. Colleges' Expansion

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

Expansion of Wilson and Miner Teachers Colleges to permit graduate instruction has been proposed to the House Subcommittee on District Appropriations by Board of Education President C. Melvin Sharpe.

The school board president argued for improved college facilities when he appeared before the committee to testify on Board of Education estimates for the 1951 school budget. Transcripts of the hearing, held behind closed doors, were made public yesterday.

The document also showed school officials have revised upward their estimate of needs for additional teachers in the Negro schools.

Basing their request on current enrollment figures, they asked that 92 additional Negro teachers be appointed next year. The original request called for 63 teachers.

First Assistant Superintendent Garnet C. Wilkinson in charge of Negro schools said 68 teachers are needed in elementary schools to cut classroom sizes down to the 36 pupils per teacher prescribed by the Board of Education. At present the average is 40.

He asked for 11 junior high teachers for kindergartens and three teachers for a reading clinic.

In asking for the new positions, school officials said they underestimated the expected enrollment in Negro schools when they made up estimates last summer.

Sharpe's views on the two teachers colleges were supported by School Superintendent Hobart M. Corning.

Para-Rescue Unit Jumps Safely To C-47 Survivors

Whitehorse, Yukon Territory, Feb. 9 (U.P.).—Six paratroopers, including a medical officer, jumped safely to a mile-high Yukon mountain shelf tonight and reached 10 plane-wreck survivors, including three injured.

Two American and four Canadian parachutists bailed out of a C-47 and landed within 300 yards of the crash victims, stranded in 60-below-zero temperatures.

The paratroopers will stay with the survivors until a ground rescue party, battling its way up the mountainside, reaches them.

A helicopter carrying a doctor was forced to return to a lake landing strip, 12 miles from the crash scene.

The survivors were aboard a United States plane that crashed 85 miles west of here Tuesday night while taking part in the two-week-old search for a U. S. Air Force C-51 missing with 44 persons aboard.

Peiping Backs Soviet In Bid to Try Hirohito

San Francisco, Feb. 9 (AP).—The Chinese Communists today officially supported Russia's belated propaganda demand for trial of Emperor Hirohito of Japan as a war criminal.

The United States has described the Russian demand as a smoke screen intended to cover Soviet failure to repatriate or explain the fate of more than 370,000 Japanese prisoners of war.

The Peiping radio, heard in San Francisco, said Li Ke-nung, Red Vice Minister of Foreign Affairs, had notified Russia that Red China approved of trying Hirohito.

Two Rail Unions Decide to Strike

Many Meetings

Mediators Fail to Solve Phone Issue

Nary a ray of hope for quick settlement of the telephone industry management-labor dispute showed up yesterday despite a dozen mediation and direct bargaining sessions here and around the Nation.

Locally, negotiations for Division 50, CIO Communication Workers of America, met with representatives of Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. A spokesman for the division said "the talk is on dead center."

In New York direct negotiations between the Long Lines Division of CWA and the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. broke down, and a Federal mediator was called into the sessions. Other mediators are already seeking a peace formula for the Bell System and the union before the February 24 strike deadline.

The Public Utilities Commission here yesterday received without comment a protest by the union against C. & P.'s newspaper ads relative to the contract dispute.

On Capitol Hill Senator Hubert Humphrey (D., Minn.) is expected to press before the Senate Labor Committee today a proposal to investigate industry-wide bargaining particularly in respect to the phone industry.

C. & P. yesterday blamed a power failure for the break in phone service in the Arlington area, where 10 percent of the phones, about 2500, went dead for 10 minutes.

Chicago, Feb. 9 (AP).—Two railroad unions announced today they have voted a nationwide strike to force a 40-hour work week.

The action automatically brings into action the peace-working machinery of the National Railway Labor Act. This would prevent any work stoppage for a month to two months or more after a strike date is set.

The unions voting to strike are the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and the Order of Railway Conductors. They claim they represent 200,000 operating railroad workers. The unions said 95.5 percent voted in favor of a strike.

The issues involved are nearly a year old. Demands for a 40-hour week and other improvements in wage and working conditions were made on the railroads last March 15. Direct bargaining conferences began September 22. The National (Railway) Mediation Board intervened January 16 but has been unable to break the stalemate.

A union spokesman said a strike date may be set late this week or early next week. Under the law, President Truman then would appoint an emergency board to delve into the dispute and make recommendations. No strike could legally take place until 30 days after the recommendations are made.

A union spokesman said it was apparent during direct negotiations that the railroads "were disinclined to adopt voluntarily the 40-hour work week for men in yard service or to voluntarily put into effect certain other wage and working improvements requested."

The emergency board's recommendations will not be binding, but could provide the basis for settlement if they are rejected.

Court Enjoins Lewis, Miners

Lewis and the miners, one of his agencies obtained an "unfair labor practices" injunction yesterday afternoon.

At the request of Robert Denham, general counsel to the National Labor Relations Board, Federal Judge Richmond B. Keech granted an order restraining Lewis and the UMW from demanding "illegal" contract provisions from the operators, and from atempting to force aceptance of the "illegal" demands through such tactics as the three-day work week.

Judge Keech will actually issue the injunction Saturday. However, even should Lewis comply with Keech's injunction, he could legally continue the miners' strike by withdrawing the "illegal" demands —unless the President follows up by getting a "national emergency" injunction.

Denham had argued that three demands by the UMW were illegal:

1. The "able and willing" clause which gives Lewis the power to call a strike at any time. Judge Keech said that such a provision is "tantamount" to nullifying any contract because the union can strike at will.

2. The union shop clause, without the UMW undergoing a union shop election as required by the Taft-Hartley Act.

3. A welfare fund restricted to union members.

Judge Keech did not rule on the legality of the demands but observed there was some possibility they were illegal, and that this was enough to justify the injunction.

Judge Keech also ruled that UMW's refusal to answer the request of the Southern Coal Producer's Association for a collective bargaining conference was "an unfair labor practice" under the Taft-Hartley Act.

In discussing the "able and willing" clause, the jurist said that even should the operators accept, knowing that Lewis was using the provision to restrict production, "the question might well arise as to whether a conspiracy in restraint of trade is in the making." The judge also suggested "if action were taken under such agreement toward limiting production for the purpose of fixing prices . . . such action might . . . be in violation of the anti-trust laws."

The court's injunction remains in effect until the National Labor Relations Board rules on the question, or until a higher court should overrule the judge.

Meanwhile, the President's factfinders, who had gotten the operators and Lewis together for seven hours on Wednesday, appeared to be optimistic that some progress had been made in the coal deadlock. "The general atmosphere was considerably cleared," Chairman David L. Cole said. He added that the "posture" in which the disputants were left early Thursday morning was "not too unfavorable."

Coal Strike Cuts Baltimore Train Service

Eight trains between Washington and Baltimore will be discontinued at 11:59 p. m. today because of the coal strike.

All are Baltimore & Ohio trains and include five expresses and three trains with Baltimore stops.

The trains to be discontinued, because of Wednesday's Interstate Commerce Commission order cutting coal-burning passenger service 50 percent, are:

Nos. 144, 150, 152, 145 and 153, between Washington and Baltimore; No. 34 (Baltimore stop), Wayne Junction, Pa., to Washington; No. 36, Washington via Baltimore to Philadelphia; No. 23, Washington to Parkersburg, W. Va., and No. 24, Parkersburg to Cumberland, Md., with a connecting service in Washington that also will be discontinued.

The picture yesterday on the four other railroads serving Washington was this:

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SYSTEM—All trains to Washington are through-service and Diesel-powered, and will not be discontinued.

RICHMOND FREDERICKSBURG & POTOMAC—Officials doubt that suspensions of service will be severe since most trains are Diesel.

CHESAPEAKE & OHIO—Officials said the C. & O. would be hardest hit nationally since all its trains are coal-burning. One of its three services in Washington—the Sportsman, between Washington and Charlottesville, Va.—was discontinued last January in ICC's one-third cut order. New schedule not announced.

PENNSYLVANIA—Only change affecting Washington is the consolidation of the reserved-seat Jeffersonian and the all-Pullman Spirit of St. Louis-New York and Washington to St. Louis. Both seat and Pullman sections will continue to leave Washington to join the New York section at Harrisburg.

Tobin Talks Of T-H Law With AFL

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 9 (AP).—Secretary of Labor Maurice Tobin and four aides discussed the Taft-Hartley law with the American Federation of Labor executive council today.

They also talked over the coal strike situation and the Truman Administration's legislative program.

Details of the discussion were not disclosed. Tobin said it was "general," but added that a part of the talk was about repeal of the Taft-Hartley law.

With Tobin were William Tyson, solicitor, and Tom Kalis, assistant solicitor of the Labor Department, and two Assistant Secretaries of Labor, Philip Kaiser and Ralph Wright.

The meeting ended the AFL council's winter meeting.

Athens, Feb. 9 (AP).—Paul R. Porter, Economic Cooperation Administrator in Greece, is ill with pneumonia and his trip to Washington this weekend has been canceled.

Union Spurns 'Reactionary' Freedoms Award

An AFL union announced yesterday it is returning an award to Freedoms Foundation which it called "a front organization for American reactionaries." But the editor of the union's newspaper simultaneously defended the foundation and criticized union officials for what he called their "bigotry."

Both the announcement returning the award and the editorial were published today in the Paper Maker, official publication of the International Brotherhood of Paper Makers.

Ed Wal, 24-year-old editor of the publication, said in his editorial he felt it was his duty "to expose not Freedoms Foundation but the officials of this union, whose bigotry and devotion to narrow principles of selfishness places them in a class with witch hunters of old. . .'

The union paper said the foundation planned to award $100,000 a year to various groups and individuals who "speak up for democracy."

In a letter to Wells, advising that the union is returning a check for $600 and a gold medal, Paul L. Phillips, the union president, accused the organization of "cloaking its true purpose behind the flag."

Phillips referred to a list of prize winners and backers of the foundation. He said that after receiving the award "we realized we were right smack in the middle of what was simply just another group promoting the propaganda spewed forth by the National Association of Manufacturers."

Phillips added that if such "statesmen" as former Secretary of State James Byrnes, Senator Robert Taft (R., Ohio), and John Foster Dulles, former New York Republican Senator, are "awarded prizes for 'Americanism' then the paper makers are in the wrong class."

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, president of Columbia University, presented the awards at a ceremony at Valley Forge. The awards were given the union for two stories published in the Paper Maker.

A, H-Bomb Defense Unknown, Bush Says

Dr. Vannevar Bush, atomic scientist, said yesterday there is no "trick way" to defend the United States against attack with A-bombs or the projected hydrogen super-bomb.

"There is no defense against a bomb, as such," Dr. Bush told newsmen after testifying at a secret two-hour session before the Senate Armed Services Committee.

By that, he explained he meant there is no method worked out by American scientists so far to detonate atomic weapons carried by enemy planes before the bombs have been dropped.

Dr. Bush quickly hedged that flat statement, however, by saying defenses against any new weapons develop so quickly that it is dangerous to make forecasts on what may emerge from defense laboratories in the future.

But at present, he said, the only way to defend against an atomic bomb is to "stop the airplane or other carrier before it gets to the target—bomb the place that is manufacturing the bombs."

Behind closed doors, Dr. Bush talked at length with members of the Armed Services Committee, giving them a broad picture of what might be expected in future warfare.

Senators were close-mouthed about his testimony, but Chairman Tydings (D., Md.) later told newsmen that Dr. Bush said there is no "complete defense" against atomic or hydrogen bombs.

"Dr. Bush gave us a very concise account of modern warfare and what has been and is being done," Tydings said.

The Maryland Senator said Dr. Bush urged "more research and development" toward building up national defense, but Tydings gave no details.

Coincidentally, Senator Bricker (R., Ohio) dropped a hint that United States scientists may have been working on the H-bomb far longer than generally supposed. It was just a week ago Tuesday that President Truman gave the go-ahead order for development of the so-called "hell" bomb.

But Bricker, a member of the Joint Congressional Atomic Committee, commented to newsmen:

"Dr. Bush told us about the hydrogen bomb three years ago—about as much as has been made public recently."

Estimates on how long it would take to build the H-bomb have ranged from one to four or five years. Scientists say it would be 8 to 1000 times more devasting than the wartime A-bomb and theoretically would have no limit to its destructive fury if it could be made big enough.

Plea Awaited

Fuchs Trial In Spy Case Opens Today

London, Feb. 9 (AP).—The mastermind of Britain's atomic research goes before London's chief magistrate Friday to answer charges that he gave his knowledge to potential enemies.

He is German-born Dr. Klaus Emil Julius Fuchs, head of the theoretical physics division at Harwell, Britain's atomic city.

One of the two counts accuses him of passing atomic secrets to someone in the United States five months before the first A-bomb was exploded—that is in February, 1945. The other charges that he did the same thing in Britain two years later.

The charges do not say who got the secrets, but the arrest of Fuchs followed an investigation by the United States Federal Bureau of Investigation into Soviet espionage.

The prisoner's father, Prof. Emil Fuchs, 75, protested his son's innocence in an interview in Germany today.

A professor of thology at Leipzig University, in the Soviet zone, he declared the accused man is no Communist "but a freedom-loving opponent of Nazism."

He described his accused son as having "the brain of a giant but the naive soul of a child."

The arrest of Fuchs last week touched off Britain's biggest spy scare since 1946, when Dr. Alan Nunn May was sent to prison for 10 years on conviction of violating the official secrets act in another atomic case. It is expected to herald a nationwide security checkup of all persons in contact with Fuchs.

Part of the evidence in Fuchs' case is likely to be heard in secret, official sources said. This probably will occur when names of other suspects are mentioned.

Fuchs, a quiet bachelor of 38, was arrested by British secret police February 2. He will face chief magistrate Sir Laurence Dunne in a small, third-story courtroom in Bow st. Friday.

Fuchs' high status in Britain's atomic energy research setup necessarily brought him into touch with leading American scientists when he was in the United States.

A-Scientists Eye Secrecy, Red Progress

London, Feb. 9 (U.P.).—American, Canadian and British scientists opened a four-day conference today—with one delegate missing—on Russia's potentiality in atomic warfare and on means of safeguarding Western atomic secrets.

The missing man is Dr. Klaus Fuchs. Named to the British delegation when the conference was called, Fuchs tonight awaited, in a cell in Brixton Prison, a hearing Friday on the charge he betrayed H-bomb and A-bomb secrets to Russia.

The atomic meeting was held at Harwell, Britain's key nuclear energy research station, in almost unprecedented secrecy. American G-men, believed to be picked FBI agents, and British War Office operatives reinforced the normal guard.

It is indicated the deligates will go thoroughly into the questions of Russian progress on the A-bomb and prospects of developing the H-bomb. No communiques will be issued. Any recommendations will be sent to the three Allied governments for approval and action.

American scientists at the conference are Bennett Bosky and James Bekerby of the Atomic Energy Commission; Dr. Frederick de Hoffman, Dr. Jerome Kellogg, Dr. Warren C. Johnson and Dr. Willard F. Libby.

It is understood that among other things the delegates will discuss the classification of atomic energy information, with particular attention to the amount of informtaion which may safely be made public.

$13 Billion For Defense Viewed Ample

By the United Press

Gen. Joseph T. McNarney said yesterday the new 13 billion dollars military budget would provide "adequate security at a price the country can afford," although the military chiefs wanted more.

The general, who is chairman of the Defense Department's management committee, outlined fiscal 1951 spending plans to a National Security Industrial Association luncheon. He said nearly every industy will share in the six billion dollars in new military orders to be placed next year.

These orders, he said, include two billion dollars for more than 3500 new planes, 300 million dollars to bring present warships up to date, 150 million dollars for tanks and anti-aircraft guns, and 40 million dollars for bombs, rockets and other ordnance.

"Our defense planning is designed to provide adequate national security at a price the country can afford to pay," he asserted.

Meantime, a Senate Banking Subcommittee on Small Business urged the Administration to set up a central procurement agency to help small business get their fair share of Federal contracts.

It said in a report that such a set-up would save time and money for smaller firms by helping them obtain technical, scientific and trade information they need to compete with bigger companies.

There is imminent danger of a "top-heavy" economy, the report said. Because about 100 big businesses have a near-monopoly on technical information resulting from their control of two thirds of the Nation's research facilities.

The subcommittee also proposed adjustment of tax rates to encourage small business, a study to see what can be done to standardize Federal bidding requirements and "liberalization" of the lending policies of the Reconstruction Finance Corp. where they affect small business.

A-Bomb Frees Blast of Wind At Sonic Speed, Survey Shows

New York Herald Tribune News Service

An atomic bomb of even "nominal" power exerts an initial, instantaneous wind blast of the speed of sound—760.5 miles per hour—and a reverse suction blast of about one-third that force within the succeeding few seconds, the Government warned yesterday.

First official announcement that the initial wind blast is of sonic speed force is contained in a survey of atomic bomb damage and recommendtaions for design of protective structures. It was prepared by experts of the Atomic Energy Commission and the Department of Defense on the basis of study of the atomic bomb drops on Japan, and released by the National Security Resources Board.

The agencies released a series of drawings showing blast effect on a frame house, almost literally turned inside out in the space of five seconds, and a tabulation showing wind velocities, pressures, duration and expectable damage at various distances from "ground zero," the point directly under the air burst of an atomic bomb.

'20,000 Tons of TNT'

The report assumed "a nominal atomic bomb releasing energy equivalent to about 20,000 tons of TNT." It made no mention of repeated A.E.C. statements that more powerful atomic bombs of the conventional type are being manufactured, nor of the newer and even more dreadful hydrogen bomb, variously estimated to be from 10 to 1000 times more powerful than atomic weapons.

Structures best able to resist atomic bombing are "heavily framed steel and reinforced concrete buildings" and, somewhat paradoxically, towering smokestacks, because of their relatively low wind-drag, except earthquake-resistant structures in the 11 Western States.

The report says:

"Our multi-story buildings in this country are generally designed to withstand wind load only. Therefore, our reinforced concrete buildings would be generally less resistant to collapse than those designed for earthquake resistance in Japan."

Copies Sent to Governors

Copies of the report, one of a series on mobilization planning, have been sent to all State Governors by Presidential Assistant John R. Steelman, acting chairman of the NSRB.

Representing a year's work, it concedes that there is "a great deal to be done" before "satisfactory blast-resistant design procedures can be established," but recommends "tentatively" that designers of new multi-story reinforced concrete or steel-frame buildings "assume a horizontal wind component of 90 pounds per square foot and a vertical component of 70 pounds per square foot for protection against structural collapse from an atomic bomb releasing energy equivalent to 20,000 tons of TNT, exploding at a horizontal distance of one-half mile and a height of approximately 2000 feet."

Up to 21 inches of concrete is necessary to prevent radiation damage—aside from blast protection—at a distance of one-half mile, and a "protected area" in addition should have a roof and walls designed to withstand "a static load of 500 pounds per square foot," the report said.

No Normal Equivalents

Experts at the National Bureau of Standards said normal peacetime engineering standards usually provide for a horizontal wind resistance of about twenty pounds per square foot—sufficient to withstand more than a seventy-five-mile-per-hour wind — as opposed to the recommended ninety pounds per square foot resistance. They said there are no equivalents in normal engineering practice to the seventy-pound vertical and 500-pound static pressure figures.

Asked whether protective and dispersal measures recommended in the report, even if adopted immediately, might be obsolete almost immediately against more powerful atomic and hydrogen weapons, an NSRB spokesman conceded that they might, but that the study "is a start," and further researches are under way on resistance to more powerful bombs.

Key industries and installations should go underground into caves, mines or newly excavated sites "to obtain a high degree of protection against the atomic bomb," the report states, estimating that there are approximately 320 million square feet of floor space available in mines of suitable type in the United States.

The NSRB will distribute another report, on detection and measure of radio-active contamination, within the next few weeks.

Judge Tells Coplon Lawyer to Quit Comedy

New York, Feb. 9 (U.P.).—Federal Judge Sylvester Ryan told Judith Coplon's attorney today to quit being so sociable in court and come up and see him some time if he wanted to chat.

The amiable presiding judge at the Coplon-Valentin Gubitchev espionage-conspiracy trial told Archibald Palmer he was "fortunate in having a judge on the bench who has known you for 30 years and will overlook your conduct."

Palmer made the jury and spectators laugh again and again today, as he played his role of court jester. At one point Judge Ryan suggested Palmer go get a drink of water and collect his thoughts.

"I don't need a drink, your honor," Palmer snapped.

Then he promptly walked to the defense table and poured himself a drink.

"Your honor made me thirsty," he said. "You know I think that that is very funny."

Judge Ryan told Palmer to reserve his little witticisms for conferences in chambers.

"You may feel free to drop in and talk to me at any time," the judge said.

During questioning of FBI Agent John F. Malley, who trailed Gubitchev through a subway tunnel last March 4, the night he and Miss Coplon were arrested, Palmer asked:

"What time did you see Mr. Tunnel going through the Gubitchev."

Palmer apologized for his slip of tongue and explained that he had "only two hours sleep last night."

Gubitchev's attorney, Abraham Pomerantz, tried to bring out during cross-examination of several FBI agents that the large number of FBI agents on Miss Coplon's and Gubitchev's trail the night they were arrested had made the couple jittery.

The Government contended earlier in the trial that the couple acted like spies, as they took circuitous routes around Manhattan before meeting each other.

They are Robert L. Caldwell, 20, and John E. Coffin, 23, of Carderock, and Walter F. Williams, jr., 18, of 1116 F st. ne. All had previously been held on housebreaking charges in lieu of $2000 bond each.

Reds' Berlin March Reported Dropped

Berlin, Feb. 9 (AP).—Soviet zone officials today ordered police to prepare to take over all Berlin by spring, but the Russians were reported to have backed down on a scheduled march on West Berlin May 28 by Communist youths.

West German officials have warned that 500,000 young Communists would hold rallies in East Berlin May 27-28 and that they planned to march on West Berlin. Communist officials have added they were assured of winning the city.

Western Allied Intelligence Officers tonight said "usually very reliable sources" told them the Russians had decided to cancel the march because they thought it too risky—that it might provoke a "grave incident" between Russian and Western troops.

The Russians showed no signs of backing down in their "baby blockade" of truck traffic to Berlin, and they staged a sudden 24-hour blockade of freight trains between East Germany and the Western sector of Berlin.

East Berlin Police President Waldemar Schmidt ordered Communist police to prepare to guarantee the public security of the German capital by spring and issued special instruction for the "coming decisive task."

[The Associated Press reported that Western Allied leaders tonight laid plans to meet any emergency that may arise May 29 with the influx into Berlin of 500,000 Communist youths from east Germany.

[The commandants made no announcement, but informed sources said they agreed generally to allow the Communist youth in West Berlin to see what it is like. But, the informant said, there will be no marching, no flag-waving, no political demonstrations, no inspired disorders.

[One of the details of the plan reported under discussion includes opening of 10,000 West Berlin homes to the East Berliners for a night or two of lodging. With West Berlin's superior food and living conditions, this may have an effect on some.]

Germans March To Protest Killing

Marburg, Germany, Feb. 9 (U.P.).—Three thousand grim-faced students, professors and townspeople marched slowly through this university city today behind the body of a German divinity student allegedly stabbed to death by an American soldier.

Army authorities were holding Pfc. Charles W. Bailey, 19, of Sardis, Ga., who they said confessed he stabbed Eberhard Grefenhagen, 22.

The student was stabbed when he answered a call for help from a woman standing in a hallway Monday night.

United States officials said they saw no reason to object to today's procession. "The students have every right to express their anger and condemnation," a spokesman said.

Christoffel Trial Faces Dismissal

A possibility that the perjury trial of Harold Christoffel might be dismissed emerged yesterday when the House refused to turn over to District Court records of one of its committees.

Defense Counsel O. John Rogge had sought to bring into court records of the House Labor Committee for March 1, 1947. Christoffel is charged with having lied when he told the committee that day that he was not a Communist.

He was convicted in a previous trial, but the verdict was set aside when the Supreme Court ruled it had not been shown a quorum of the committee was present. Chief Prosecutor John S. Pratt placed 13 members of the 25-man committee on the stand during the current retrial to testify they were present, when Christoffel testified.

After a recess yesterday Pratt informed the court the records would be made available to defense counsel at the committee's office.

"That is not satisfactory," said Rogge. "I want those records here in court as evidence."

He told the jury he could not proceed with the defense "if the committee records are not produced."

Ralph R. Roberts, clerk of the House, who has been directed by two House resolutions not to produce the records in court, said the matter had been referred to the House Judiciary Committee. He was told by Judge F. Dickinson Letts to inform the Judiciary Committee "it is the opinion of the court that the case cannot proceed to a final conclusion until the House tells us whether we can have this important evidence."

He added that it was "difficult to understand their reluctance" to prevent "the defense from having this evidence." He then suggested he might "adjourn this trial until the House takes some action.

Earlier Judge Letts had denied a defense motion for a directed verdict of acquittal after Rogge argued that evidence produced so far had not made a case against his client.

U.S. Acts to Aid Non-Red Asia

that 800 million people of Asia were still outside the curtain of Soviet power. "If we don't vote this money," he exclaimed, "what can these 800 million do except to make their pilgrimage to Moscow?"

The bill now goes to conference for the reconciling of minor differences with versions already passed by the Senate. The section extending the time-limit for spending in Formosa is due for a vote in the Senate today.

After the House vote the State Department issued its reply to a questionnaire by Representative John Davis Lodge (R., Conn.), dealing in part with Formosa.

Attitude Toward Formosa

The department told Lodge that any long-range American help for Formosa must depend on whether the Chinese Nationalists show they can defend and hold the island.

Further aid, the department said, must also depend on a "clear showing" by the Nationalists that they can restore economic and political stability there.

The department rejected any idea of a plebiscite in Formosa, saying it would be interpreted in Asia "as an attempt by this Government to separate Formosa from China in violation of its pledges." Lodge said he was dissatisfied with this answer, and found other answers to his questions "evasive."

Churchill Says He Will End Gas Rationing

London, Feb. 9 (U.P.).—Winston Churchill accused the Labor government today of begging and accepting dollars from the United States without so much as a "thank you."

Churchill also made the first specific Conservative campaign promise with a pledge to abolish gasoline rationing "at the earliest possible moment" if his party wins the February 23 general election. British car owners now get only enough fuel to drive 90 miles a month.

Labor Prime Minister Clement Attlee warned the Conservative leader has a spectacular last-minute stunt up his sleeve. He said Labor is grateful to the United States but he insisted that Britain has given away as much to poorer countries as it has received from America in Marshall aid.

Leftists Block Bonn Program To Aid Jobless

Bonn (Friday), Feb. 10 (AP).—Socialists early today blocked, at least temporarily, an $850,000,000 West German government program to relieve unemployment.

They did so to keep the conservative government from getting credit for providing work for West Germany's estimated 1,900,000 jobless.

The Socialists made their successful parliamentary move after many Conservative deputies had left the chamber weary after 10 hours' debate.

"It was a victory of laziness," said West Germany's 73-year-old Chancellor Konrad Adenauer. He was plainly angry.

The plan called for an internal loan to provide work. Most of the money would have been spent on housing, thus helping to solve two major problems at once. The rest would have gone to finance long-term export contracts, railway projects, small businesses, communications and jobs for refugees.

Government experts said they expected it to provide work for one million persons.

RFC to Study Aid For Virgin Islands

St Thomas, Virgin Islands, Feb. 9 (U.P.).—Secretary of Interior Oscar L. Chapman, Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan and Chairman Harley Hise of the Reconstruction Finance Corp. left for Washington today after the annual meeting of the Virgin Islands Corp.

Hise agreed to send experts to assist in preparing data for presentation to RFC directors looking towards the RFC purchasing bond issues from the St. Thomas and St. John municipalities for power supply development.

Nationalists Extend Blockade To Shut Off South China Ports

Taipei, Formosa, Feb. 9 (U.P.).—The Chinese Nationalists extended their air and sea blockade to the Indo-China border today to cut off supplies flowing to the Communists through South China ports.

The announcement came as Hainan Island braced for possible early invasion following the almost overnight appearance of nearly 3000 junks and other boats along the coast and on Luichow Peninsula.

Extension of the blockade is effective at midnight Saturday. The new blockaded area runs from some 200 miles west of Hongkong around Luichow Peninsula to Indo-China, a distance of about 200 miles. The port closure already is so effective Shanghai's industries are reported "stagnant."

Nationalists charged arms and ammunition from Philippine Communists have been funneled through Hongkong and the Portuguese colony of Macao to the Communist armies grouped for the Hainan invasion.

Aerial reconnaissance spotted the new junk concentrations and three Communist armies massed almost in the center of Luichow Peninsula, a government spokesman said. Another Communist army is at the port of Pakhoi, west of the peninsula, another is at Limkong on the northwest side and still another in the Tinpak and Yuengkong coastal area east of the peninsula.

Hainan reported Communist irregulars on the move.

Air and Navy bombardmnt of military establishments south of Shanghai were increased.

The Communist radio blamed "American imperialism" for heavy Nationalist air raids on Shanghai and accuse the United States of planning bacteriological and atomic warfare. It promised "retribution" within the year.

'World Government' Plan Offered Senate

By The Associated Press

Senator Taylor of Idaho—who once opposed the Administration's tough policy toward Russia—yesterday offered the Senate his own plan for ending the cold war with the Soviet.

Taylor bolted the Democratic ranks two years ago to run for Vice President on Henry A. Wallace's Progressive Party ticket. He was bitterly opposed to President Truman's cold-war moves.

Now Taylor wants Mr. Truman to call a general conference of the United Nations to adopt a constitution for a "true world government."

He placed his proposal before a Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee which is studying several resolutions designed to strengthen the U. N.

If the general U. N. conference should not be called within a year after his resolution is approved, Taylor proposes the President "should then call a world constitutional convention of delegates elected directly by the people for the purpose of adopting a world government constitution."

Taylor, a long-time advocate of world government, acted without the support of other Senators.

Former Supreme Court Justice Owen J. Roberts told the subcommittee yesterday he is opposed at this time to any moves toward a world federation. Roberts, who is chairman of the Atlantic Union Committee, said the only federation with a chance for success at this time would be a union of the Atlantic democracies.

Referring to Russia, he added: "I could not agree to federate cheek by jowl with a nation which practices slavery."

Roberts said the development of a hydrogen bomb will make it imperative for the United States to seek an Atlantic union.

Spokesmen for the United World Federalists meanwhile drew a sharp contrast between their idea of a world government and the plan advanced by Taylor. World Federalist headquarters stressed that unlike Taylor they (1) are not trying to force an immediate conference for the purpose of rewriting the United Nations Charter and (2) they would limit world government pretty much to two primary functions—control of armaments and prevention of aggression.

Dr. Harold C. Urey, one-time atomic scientist, testified that the only way left to meet the atomic threat is to extend law and order through an expanded central government.

A union of Atlantic powers, he argued, would give the western Nations a balance of power—economic, military and political—in the cold war with Russia. And he said this would discourage aggressive moves by the Soviet.

Fairfax Farmers Told Of Mar. 1 PMA Deadline

Fairfax County farmers were reminded yesterday that March 1 is the deadline for signing up for the 1950 Production Marketing Administration program.

M. V. Leigh, chairman of the county PMA committee, urged farmers to visit the PMA county committee office, Fairfax, promptly. He pointed out that the necessary paper work must be done at the office in person.

House Gets New Bill to Build Second Airport

Representative Oren Harris (D., Ark.) yesterday introduced a House bill to authorize a second major airport for the Nation's Capital.

The bill is like one sponsored by Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.) which won unanimous approval this week of the Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee and is now awaiting Senate action.

Estimated cost of the initial airport layout is some 14 million; several sites are being studied in Virginia and Maryland counties.

U. S. Charges Monopoly in Hard Gelatin Capsules

Detroit, Feb. 9 (AP).—Two leading drug-making firms today were charged with seeking to monopolize the sale of hard gelatin capsules.

A civil antitrust suit charging the two firms with "illegal activities" was filed in Federal Court here today by the United States Justice Department. Parke-Davis & Co. of Detroit and Eli Lilly & Co. of Indianapolis are named as defendants.

The two firms, the suit claims, "produce and sell over 90 percent of all hard gelatin capsules sold in the United States today." The capsules are used primarily as containers for drugs, including vitamin tablets.

The Justice Department alleged that the two firms, acting together, have obtained control over machinery used in making and filling the capsules. They were thus enabled to fix prices, it claimed.

In Detroit, Secretary Kenneth D. McGregor of Parke-Davis said: "Until we have received the formal complaint and have had an opportunity to study it, we have no comment."

Lilly company officials also declined comment.

Coalition Shelves Housing Bill for 2 Weeks Pending Study; Supporters Flabbergasted

Flabbergasted Administration leaders on the Senate Banking Committee yesterday found President Truman's housing program shelved for two weeks pending a study of its impact on the national economy.

The action was taken by five Republicans joined by two Democrats.

Since congressional authority for FHA expires March 1, committee action obviously means that either some FHA sections lapse temporarily or Congress will, as it has done in the past, give FHA a temporary extension pending struggle over the full housing program. Administration leaders expressed their opposition to a temporary FHA extension.

The motion to defer action for two weeks was made by Senator Charles W. Tobey (R., N. H.). Voting for it were Senators Homer Capehart (R., Ind.), Ralph Flanders (R., Vt.), John Bricker (R., Ohio), Irving Ives (R., N. Y.), J. William Fulbright (D., Ark.), and A. Willis Robertson (D., Va.).

The move came as a complete surprise to Chairman Burnet R. Maybank (D., S. C.), and Subcommittee Chairman John Sparkman (D., Ala.). A subcommittee had approved the bill by a 6-to-1 vote two days ago, with Flanders and Ives voting to report it. The Republicans explained the delay was necessitated by Lincoln Day speeches, and consequent lack of time to study the measure.

Fulbright moved that the governors of the Federal Reserve Board be asked to give the committee a report on any inflationary tendency which might be increased by Title III, dealing with cooperative housing.

The motion was amended by Ives to require a report from the Federal Reserve Board on the effect of all sections of the bill on the national economy. Maybank has asked the Federal Reserve Board for a report on the measure Thursday. He said the Federal Reserve group presumably had already studied the measure and reported on it to the Bureau of the Budget.

Administration forces were shaken also by a near-vote on a motion to strike the cooperative housing section from the bill entirely. The motion was made by Bricker. Tentatively the group line up as follows: For the Bricker motion—Bricker, Fulbright, Robertson, Tobey, Capehart (by proxy); Against—Taylor, Sparkman, Douglas, Long (by proxy), Flanders and Maybank. Senator J. Allen Frear, jr. (D., Del.) did not vote and it was decided not to record the tally.

Before the major vote the group voted to defer any action at all on a section permitting 25 million dollars in RFC financing for prefabricated houses. The section was knocked out by unanimous vote in the belief this was not a correct function for RFC. The Housing and Home Finance Agency was asked to work out a new plan for financing.

FHA can continue Title II work if Congress does not immediately renew its authorization but it cannot accept new loans. Title I will expire and so will Title VI, the rental section.

Plan to Plug Tax Loopholes Stirs Surprises

By the United Press

President Truman's proposal to close tax "loopholes" ran into surprise complications yesterday.

He has asked Congress to cut down on the special tax exemptions allowed to oil and gas, sulphur, metails, coal and certain nonmetallics industries.

Instead of cuts, the House Ways and Means Committee received demands from other industries—sand and gravel and mineral shell deposits—to be added to those that get the tax advantage.

J. Rutledge Hill, of Dallas, made an argument that sand and gravel should get the same advantage allowed to the non-metallic mining industry. The special allowance now is 15 percent and the Treasury recommended that it be cut to 5 percent.

George R. Uzzell, Salisbury, N. C., made a plea along the same lines. He also said it would provide more employment and reduce prices.

W. P. Hamblen, Houston, Tex., said it is only fair that companies providing mineral shell deposits should get a depletion allowance too. He said it is a vital defense material and is used for air field construction and for building roads to war plants and docks.

Spokesmen for other groups which were exempted from the Treasury cut-down proposals at this time objected to the idea that they may be the next victims.

Among them were spokesmen for the coal industry, which now gets a 5 percent allowance, and for the American Mining Congress, whose members get a 15 percent allowance on the metals they produce.

Miami Station Denied Unlimited Operation

By The Associated Press

The Communications Commission yesterday denied WFEC, Miami, Fla., permission to change from daytime operation to unlimited time and to increase its power from 1220 to 1230 kilocycles.

FCC also approved assignment of WFEC's license from Florida East Coast Broadcasting Co. to Howard D. Steere for $50,000.

The commission authorized Robert H. Epperson to sell a 50 percent interest in WYVE, Whiteville, Va., to his partner, A. M. Gates, for $14,673.

Ukrainian Accuses Russians Of Mass Murder of Millions

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

A "businesslike" and cold mass murder of millions is being carried on by the Soviet Union as part of a calculated military and geopolitical plan, Professor Lev E. Dobriansky of Georgetown University charged yesterday.

Professor Dobriansky, president of the Ukrainian Congress Committee of America, gave a Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee a detailed and documented resume of what he called the Soviet Union's program of extermination of various racial and national groups.

The bloodshed and suffering under this program "surpass the comfortable comprehension of most Americans," Dobriansky told the committee.

Calls Ukrainian Case Classic

"In the systematic annihilation of a nation . . . the case of the Ukrainian people in classic," he said. "Of the enslaved European nations, it has had the earliest, longest and broadest experience with Soviet genocide which far exceeds what the Nazis diabolically produced. The systematic practice of national genocide is an integral part of Soviet political strategy toward world domination."

He cited Lenin's words, "Three-quarters of mankind may die, providing the remaining one-quarter become Communists." He asserted the present masters of Russia are religiously following this "calculated terrorism."

Answering the arguments of the American Bar Association opposing ratification by the United States of a United Nations anti-genocide convention, the professor acknowledged that its mere acceptance by the United States will not serve to stop all genocide by the Soviet Union. He stressed, however, that the convention may have the effect of slowing down the rate of the alleged Soviet mass murders.

Cites Convention's Values

Its "specific values" he said are:

1. It will impart "immense and genuine hope and strength" to the hearts of the enslaved millions haunted by "the deathly ax of Soviet national genocide."

2. It will focus the moral condemnation of the world on the "businesslike Soviet genocidists."

3. It may serve to moderate the rate of Soviet genocidal advances.

4. Placed on the books of international law, it will stand as a formidable promise of redress.

5. American adherence to its provisions will serve to enunciate the civilized principles for which this Nation stands

AFL Urges Ratification

On behalf of the American Federation of Labor, George P. Delaney, international representative, urged ratification of the genocide convention to prevent "imminent mass destruction of nations now subjugated to Soviet Russia.'

He warned that Russia will now proceed to liquidate "an essential part of the Chinese nation consisting of national leaders, clergymen, writers, labor leaders, educators and business men, in the hope that by destroying this essential leadership the remainder of the Chinese nation will disintegrate and become enslaved."

"It is not true that Russia is independent of world opinion," Delaney declared, "because Russia is spending hundreds of millions of dollars on propaganda in foreign countries. She cannot afford to be accused of genocide in a legal form while she is parading as a savior of smaller nations and protector of the peoples of Asia."

House Unit Passes Bill Giving States Title to Tidelands

A House Judiciary Subcommittee yesterday approved a bill giving the states clear title to so-called tidelands, often rich in oil deposits.

Under the measure the Federal Government would recognize state sovereignty over submerged coastal lands to a distance of three miles seaward.

In the case of Texas, state jurisdiction would be recognized to a distance of 10½ miles, because of conditions under which the state joined the union in 1845.

Pending in the House is another bill—backed by the Administration—to give the Federal Government clear title to the controversial lands.

The Supreme Court is scheduled to hear arguments March 13 in the Government's suits against Texas and Louisiana for control over the lands off their Gulf Coast shores.

Report Cites Goodwill Aid to Handicapped

The Davis Memorial Goodwill Industries provided employment for 316 handicapped persons with wages totaling $240,595 during 1949, James C. Dulin, jr., president, reported yesterday.

His statement was made at the annual meeting, held jointly with the Goodwill Guild at the Hotel 2400.

The luncheon-meeting also served as the kick-off for Goodwill Industries' annual membership campaign to raise $25,000 to underwrite the organization's rehabilitation work. The campaign will continue through this month.

The following new trustees were elected yesterday: Mrs. Charles Brannan, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture; Mrs. Oscar Chapman, wife of the Secretary of the Interior, and F. Glenn Burns, general manager of International Business Machines Co.

The following trustees were reelected: Dulin, Stafford S. Fletcher, C. Vernon Hill, Leland S. McCarthy, Mrs. Elizabeth Murray and Dr. John W. Rustin.

Clay Sees Defeat Of East Zone Reds By Revolt or Vote

Atlanta, Feb. 9 (U.P.).—Gen. Lucius D. Clay today predicted East Europe would begin to cast off the Russian yoke by revolution or free elections as soon as economic stability is attained.

If conditions continue to improve as they have in the past two years, he said, the Russians may have to pull back the Iron Curtain from Germany within five years.

"However," he cautioned, "if it takes five years or 50 years, I think we should keep troops in middle Germany because that is our frontier and we should defend it."

He said a strong West Germany is essential to west Europe and urged restoration of German industry over French protests.

Americas Urged To Demand Repeal Of Trujillo Powers

Havana, Feb 9 (U.P.).—Cuba has asked the Organization of American States to demand the repeal of extraordinary war powers vested in Dominican Republic President Rafael Leonidas Trujillo by Congress, reliable sources reported today.

Cuba contends such powers have endangered the system of collective inter-American security achieved at hemisphere conferences and which has been held up as a model of the Old World.

Cuba holds that Trujillo's action in asking his Congress to empower him to declare war on any nation harboring a potential invasion force against the Dominican Republic is a violation of the Inter-American Defense Pact signed in Rio de Janeiro, the sources said.

Sothoron Sets Feb. 15 for Public Hearing On 'Home Rule' Bill for Prince Georges

By a Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 9. — The public of Prince Georges County will have a chance to express its opinion on the "home rule" bill for the county introduced in the Legislature here.

State Senator L. Harold Sothoron, of University Park, who introduced the measure Tuesday under emergency provisions, announced that a public hearing will take place at 8:30 p. m., Wednesday, February 15, in the office of can't get passed."

Prince Georges County commismittee approved the measure for consideration, taking the first step to make good Sothoron's statement that "I don't introduce a bill I can't get passed."

The present session of the Legislature may consider only fiscal or emergency measures, under the new constitutional amendment. Senator Sothoron pointed out that at the last session, the Legislature passed a bill providing for a full-time, paid chairman of the Prince Georges County commissioners.

But in changing the lay, it neglected to mention in the new act how many other commissioners there shall be beside the chairman. Hence, the emergency.

The Sothoron bill was drafted, it was revealed yesterday, by the sponsor and Jerrold Powers, counsel to the board of county commissioners. But in Prince Georges County, Powers said he was acting only as a Democrat and not in his official capacity in drawing the measure.

There was no official action by the commissioners to approve it, leaders said, but they were in general consultation on its provisions and approved them unofficially.

Principal effect of the bill, if it is enacted, will be to transfer to the County Commissioners a number of functions now reserved to the Legislature.

The board will have 11 general powers under the measure. Among these would be to establish departments of county government and prescribe their functions; provide for appointment and removal of a number of county officials and employes and fix salaries; establish a merit system; govern procurement for the county; provide for the county police force; handle purchase, use and sale of county real estate; and adopt a system of bugetary control and audit of county funds.

The full-time chairman of the board, who will in effect be county executive officer, under the bill, will get $7500 a year.

Text of Prince Georges Bill

Annapolis, Feb. 9 (Spl.).—Copies of State Senator L. Harold Sothoron's bill to give Prince Georges County a streamlined "home rule" type government were made available today. It is listed as Senate Bill No. 43.

The text, which follows, does not include the title, substance of which is repeated in the body of the bill:

Section 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, That Section 381, as amended by Chapter 756 of the Laws of Maryland, 1949, Sections 382, 383, 384, 385, 386, 387, Section 388, as amended by Chapter 907 of the Laws of Maryland, 1945, Section 389, as amended by Chapter 399 of the Laws of Maryland, 1947, Section 390, as amended by Chapter 76 of the Laws of Maryland, 1947, Section 391, Section 393, as amended by Chapter 75 of the Laws of Maryland, 1947, Section 393-A, as enacted by Chapter 827 of the Laws of Maryland, 1945, the Section enacted as Section 394, by Chapter 933 of the Laws of Maryland, 1945, and as amended by Chapter 827 of the Laws of Maryland, 1947, Sections 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 400, 401, 402, 403, 406, 407, 408, 408, Sections 410 and 411, as amended by Chapter 367 of the Laws of Maryland, 1947, Section 412, Sections 413 and 414 as amended by Chapter 367 of the Laws of Maryland, 1947, Section 416, Sections 416-A and 416-B as enacted by Chapter 900 of the Laws of Maryland, 1945, Sections 417, 418, 419, 420, 421, 422, 423, 424, 425 426, and 427, of the Code of Public Local Laws of Prince Georges County (Flacks 1943 Edition), be and they are hereby repealed.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That a new section be added to the Code of Public Local Laws of Prince Georges County (Flack's 1943 Edition), to be known as Section 381, and to follow immediately after the sub-title "County Commissioners," to read as follows:

381. (a) There shall be five County Commissioners for Prince Georges County, elected for terms of four years, and they shall be known by the corporate style of "County Commissioners for Prince Georges County," herein sometimes referred to as the Board. They shall elect a Chairman to serve during his term of office who shall devote his full time to the duties of his office, and shall have, subject to the direction of and review by the Board, administrative supervision over all departments and employes of the county government. The Chairman shall receive an annual salary of Seven Thousand Five Hundred Dollars and each of the other Commissioners shall receive an annual salary of Three Thousand Six Hundred Dollars, as full compensation for their official duties as Commissioner or in any ex officio capacity.

(b) The Board shall regularly meet at least two days each week as County Commissioners, in addition to such meetings as it may hold as the District Council of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission. It shall have all the power and authority now or hereafter granted to it by law, and, in addition, may, by resolution, ordinance, or other appropriate action:

1. Adopt rules of procedure for the conduct of its meetings.

2. Establish departments of the county government, and prescribe their functions.

3. Provide for the appointment and removal of all county officers and employes except those whose appointment or election is provided for by the constitution or public general or public local laws, and fix their salary or compensation.

4 Prescribe the duties, powers, and functions of any officer, employe, or board appointed by it or under its supervision, and to require any officer or employe to give bonds in such form and penalty as it may prescribe.

5. Prescribe and provide for the payment of traveling and other expenses of the judges, State's attorney, sheriff, justices of the peace, and all other elected and appointed officers and employes of the county incurred in the performance of their official duties.

6. Establish a merit system in connection with the appointment of all county officers or employes not elected or appointed under the constitution or public general laws of the State.

7. Prescribe rules and regulations for procurement of materials, supplies, and public work.

8. Acquire by purchase, condemnation, or lease, and to dispose of by sale or lease, real estate for any public purpose, and to erect buildings thereon for the benefit of the county.

9. Provide for a County Police Force.

10. Fix charges for permits issued by the board.

11. Adopt a system of budgetary control and audit of all county funds.

Sec. 3. And be it further enacted that the General Assembly of Maryland does hereby determine that because of the enormous recent increase in population in Prince Georges County, and its resultant burden on all public services and facilities, an acute emergency exists with respect to the administrative machinery of government in Prince Georges County, and the General Assembly of Maryland further determines that passage of this act is necessary to deal properly with such acute emergency.

Sec. 4. And be it further enacted, That this Act shall take effect July 1, 1950.

Ingrid Film Censorship Stirs Conflict in Maryland

By a Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 9.—The women, bless 'em, just don't seem to agree.

Latest case in point happened here today. A Baltimore housewife who represents that city's Second District, introduced a joint resolution asking the Maryland General Assembly to cast an official frown on Ingrid Bergman's new film, "Stromboli."

The resolution maker, Mrs. Rose Marie Murphy, Democrat, doesn't want Maryland movie houses to show the film. If they do, she doesn't want residents of the Free State to turn in at those turnstiles and view it.

Miss Bergmann last week gave birth to a son, Roberto, named after Roberto Rosselini, the Italian movie director she intends to marry.

Mrs. Murphy contends that the film glorifies "a person who in her private life has seriously transgressed the laws of morality and the high duties of family life."

But barely had the resolution hit the hopper when another quarter of the House's female contingent spoke up.

Mrs. Leona M. Rush, a Montgomery County Republican delegate, tsk-tsked to reporters that the resolution "doesn't make sense."

"It is absolutely ludicrous," she said, "to try to legislate morals. I've always said it can't be done. You have a right to turn off your radio, and you certainly have a right not to go to the movies."

Regardless of what the assembly does, the State board of motion picture censors already has announced that it has no power to ban the film in Maryland.

Delegates' Fares Are Paid

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 9.—A red-faced Montgomery County delegation is going around muttering in its coffee cups these days.

For the delegation introduced a bill it didn't want to—and never meant to.

That bill, therefore, is going to die on the vine, and the delegation has now introduced another bill—the right one this time.

Delegation leader Anders Lofstrand said it happened this way:

The delegation was sponsoring a measure that would make referendums on all bond issues not mandatory.

Four correct copies of the bill—together with a fifth copy of a bill introduced at the special session and still kicking around the delegation room—were handed up to the House speaker.

As luck would have it, the wrong copy was the one which went to the printer.

Ingrid Gets Juarez Divorce; Expected to Wed Soon

Rome (Friday), Feb. 10 (U.P.).—Ingrid Bergman today was made free to wed, three days before the deadline for official registration of the birth of the boy born to her February 2.

She was granted a divorce from Dr. Peter Lindstrom in Juarez, Mexico.

It was expected she and Roberto Rossellini, Italian movie director who has announced he is the father of her baby, would seek to get married by civil ceremony within 48 hours.

GOP Minority Sharpens Knives for Battle Against Gov. Lane's Tax Reduction Plan

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 9 (AP).—Republicans and some Democrats bent on tax cuts kept their budget knives sharp today as Governor Lane's own plan for reductions stalled in committee.

The GOP minority put final touches on its opposition program for tax relief, one phase of which reportedly would allow Marylanders to deduct Federal income taxes in computing their State levy.

Jim Crow Repeal Asked

Among other things, measures put in today would:

Repeal Maryland's 46-year-old "Jim Crow" law;

Move the State income and alcoholic beverage tax offices back to Annapolis from Baltimore;

Confine 30-day, even-year sessions to State budget and tax affairs—and nothing else.

Make standard time mandatory throughout the State.

Require contractors on State jobs to pay their employes overtime after 8 hours in any one day or 40 hours a week.

Unit on Alcoholism

Before adjourning for the day, the General Assembly also completed action on a bill that would create a commission on alcoholism, with $100,000 to operate four clinics for chronic alcoholics.

Two others sent to the Governor would place Maryland in a reciprocal arrangement with other States to prosecute tax delinquents and permit use of State funds to pay half the salaries of Baltimore City tax assessors.

Two bills to allow deduction of Federal income taxes went into the House. A Democrat, Delegate Sklar of Baltimore's Fourth District, sponsored one. Three Republicans, Minority Leader Ramsburg (Frederick) and Delegates Clark (Montgomery) and Whitworth (Allegany), backed the other. The comptroller's office estimated adoption of either measure would cost the State $3,500,000 a year. But proponents said the Federal Government permits deduction of State income tax payments. They held the State should grant the same privilege.

Child Placement Argued

Meanwhile, Maryland's top welfare officials disagreed sharply today on the merits of a bill to tighten up child placement laws.

T. J. S. Waxter, Baltimore's welfare head, told a House Judiciary Committee that "if anything the bill opens up wide areas for baby black-marketers."

State Welfare Director J. Milton Patterson, declared that the bill "is a step in the right direction" and urged its enactment.

Crux of the measure is a clause to prohibit child placements except by licensed agencies, local welfare departments, natural parents, grandparents, uncles and aunts.

All sales tax revenues over 20 million dollars would be used to finance a Maryland veterans bonus, under a revised measure to be introduced in the Senate Friday.

In addition, all "breakage" money from pari-mutuel betting at flat and harness racing tracks would go toward payments of bonus bonds if necessary.

If those two sources of revenues were insufficient to service the proposed $89,998,800 bonus bond issue, proceeds of the State real estate tax would be used to make up the difference.

College Held in Grip Of Religious Ardor

Wheaton, Ill., Feb. 9 (U.P.).—A spontaneous outburst of religious fervor gripped the students of Wheaton College today and was continuing after more than 24 hours of an amazing demonstration of faith.

Classes were suspended at the theological training school as 1500 men and women students jammed the chapel to proclaim their faith. The demonstration began during a routine religious service last night.

Dr. J. Raymond Edman, president of the college, asked if there was anyone who would "like to give a word of testimony or praise on the blessings of this week?"

Ten students arose and began pouring out their faith. Others joined and all night long the demonstration went on. Today more and more students packed into the chapel until all standing room was gone and the crowd overflowed into the balcony and the basement. School officials said "We will let it run its course."

One of the first students to rise was Bud Schaeffer, cocaptain of the basketball team, who said he "wanted to get things right with God."

A girl student told how she had been "afraid and ashamed of the Lord, but praise God, I'm not now." Another girl confessed she had cheated on an examination.

The dining hall was kept open and students drifted in and out of the chapel to eat. Some went home temporarily to get some sleep. A few tried to go to classes, but there were not enough students or faculty members on hand and classes were forgotten.

At about 3 a. m. Edman believed the demonstration was over and asked that any more students who wished to be heard come to the platform. About 150 surged from their seats in response.

Hacker Aids Police, Wins $25 Award

Cab Driver Ernest Boozer's help to police in catching a purse snatcher paid off yesterday. At Police Headquarters, he received a $25 award and letter of commendation from police officials.

Boozer

The cab driver, who is 32 and lives at 4211 Hayes st. ne., heard Susie Parrott of 1910 1st st. nw., screaming near her home about 12:30 a. m. on January 7. She told him her purse had been snatched by two men and pointed them out.

Boozer followed them in his cab for three blocks until he picked up Police Pvt. Lawrence B. Raney of the Thirteenth Precinct, and the two took after the fleeing men on foot, capturing one of them.

The prisoner, Thomas E. Millard, 23, of 28 O st. nw., is now held under $7000 bond on a robbery charge pending grand jury action. His alleged companion, Arthur B. Roane, 20, of 1423 1st st. nw., was arrested the next day and liberated on $2000 bond on a robbery charge.

The award was presented by Capt. Robert D. Chenault of the Thirteenth Precinct, and Lieut. Edgar E. Scott, head of the robbery squad.

Police Solve Rose Holdup, Still Hunt Loot

New York, Feb. 9 (U.P.).—Police today said the Billy Rose jewel robbery had been solved but none of the loot recovered. They said two bandits had been arrested, two were being sought and a fifth was being questioned.

Police said the showman's butler, 35-year-old James McDonald, unwittingly was responsible for the burglary. Rose said McDonald "doesn't know it yet, but he's my ex-butler."

The two under arrest are Andrew Finnegan, 32, a longshoreman, and Alex Grenlick, 33, a stevedore.

Police said the two ex-convicts had admitted the robbery and confessed selling the jewels for $3300.

Police said McDonald and one of four struck up a conversation at a bar and that the butler invited the youth to visit him.

While McDonald was fixing sandwiches, police said, the youth let his three pals into the apartment. They tied up the butler. Rose estimated the loot at $100,000, but police said the total value was only $25,000.

Killer Uses Bra To Strangle Redhead

New Orleans, Feb. 9 (U.P.).—A sailor's pretty red-haired wife, clad only in silk panties, was found strangled with her brassiere here last night. Police identified her as Mrs. Betty Jean Guillory, 25, of Randleman, N. C.

The body was found on the bed, her head jammed between the mattress and headboard. Her pink brassiere was knotted tightly around her neck.

The floor was littered with clothing and papers and drawers had been yanked open and their contents scattered.

Neighbors said they heard an argument in Mrs. Guillory's apartment between 3:30 and 5 a.m. Monday during which a man accused her of taking his money.

Police detained Fernando Fagundo, 23-year-old bartender who said he had a "date" with the slain woman at 3 a.m. Monday. "But she didn't keep it," he said.

Police were seeking the woman's husband, John, believed to be aboard a merchant ship.

Bond Sleuth Finds 'Skipper'

Bondsman Meyer Weinstein yesterday revealed in District Court how he turned detective, traced down a bond skipper and saved a possible $1500 forfeiture.

Weinstein put up $1500 bail for Robert C. Taylor, 29, charged early in January with possession and sale of narcotics. Taylor went free pending grand jury action.

About January 26 Taylor, according to Weinstein, disappeared. With grand jury presentment in the offing, and no defendant available, the bondsman had visions of his $1500 disappearing as completely as Taylor.

He turned sleuth, unearthing a tip Taylor might be found in "a hospital." Weinstein sent an agent to the Public Health Service Hospital at Lexington, Ky., where drug addicts are treated.

Taylor was there, having entered as a volunteer patient.

He agreed to come back to Washington, escorted by Weinstein's aide. Yesterday, as the bondsman stood by Federal Judge Alexander Holtzoff ordered Taylor committed, pending grand jury action.

Wielding Knife

'Wild' Man Terrorizes N. Y. Crowds

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
JOHN MAIONE
. . . terror of Times Square

New York, Feb. 8 (U.P.).—A 6-foot 2-inch, 200-pound, unemployed longshoreman wielding a butcher knife chased the driver and 20 passengers off a bus into the rain at Times Square today and drove away. He abandoned the bus four blocks away and ran, but was captured by two policemen.

Police said John Maione, 36, took $4.29 from the fare box. Charged with assault, robbery and grand larceny, he was held for mental observation.

The policemen knew nothing of the bus holdup when they saw Maione sprinting away waving his butcher knife. They chased him. He stopped, turned and threatened to kill himself.

"Drop the knife or I'll shoot you," ordered Patrolman Phillip J. Kelly.

Bluecher Willing To Meet French Needs From Saar

By The Associated Press

Franz Bluecher, west German vice chancellor, said yesterday his government "recognizes the need" of France to have access to the coal and industrial products of the Saar.

He told a news conference that a settlement of the question of future ownership of the Saar should be "discussed at the right moment and with great calm."

"There is no German who would not be ready to see to it that France gets the necessary products from the Saar," he said.

Bluecher's news conference was the first held by any German official here since the end of the war.

In reply to questions, he also:

1. Made it plain that he thought the Western powers should maintain occupation forces in western Germany even if the Russians remove their troops from eastern Germany.

2. Said that western Germany would need additional financial aid, presumably from the United States, after the Marshall Plan ends.

6 Traffic Deaths During January, 5 a Year Ago

Traffic accidents killed 6 persons and injured 490 others in the District during the month of January, police reported yesterday. Five were killed during January, 1949.

Total accidents reached 1115 during the month as compared to 973 during January of last year.

Reporter Tells of Making 'Investments' in Ambrose Stamp Operations to handle any purchase I cared to make as he could make sure they were "hand-picked."

Eventually, I raised $1500, which I turned over to him. Several weeks later he gave me the stamps I put them in a vault and told myself I'd forget about them for five years to see what happened to their price.

Over the next year or more Harold suggested other stamp purchases to me. I didn't buy for financial reasons.

At lunch prior to last Labor Day we talked stamps again. Harold said he could get me from $3000 to $3500 for my stamps if I wished to sell them, but he recommended against the sale because he felt the stamps would continue to increase in value. I didn't sell and I still have them.

Harold said he had brought up the sale possibility because a friend of his in New York was most anxious to buy a big block of a certain issue of stamps. Harold said he would sell him some of his own stamps, buy some others, and the possibility occurred to him that I might want to sell mine and help him finance the deal. He emphasized this would be a qluick turnover deal.

The postal official assured me repeatedly that there was nothing "wrong" or even questionable about the proposed sale. He said he merely knew of someone who wanted to buy something and that he could purchase and sell to him at a higher price. It sounded plausible.

To me, it looked like a grand opportunity to make some money. I put up $4400 of my own and later I borrowed another $2000 from a friend with a promise to pay him 25 per cent, or a total of $6600. This and all other transactions were made in cash. Ambrose insisted on cash.

The latter part of September Ambrose gave me $9300 in cash, a $2700 "profit." My "profit" was $2200—or 50 per cent—as I gave $500 to my delighted friend who has no knowledge of what was involved.

At the time, Ambrose insisted that his unidentified New Yorker was desirous of buying the remainder of the available stamps. He promised an equally quick transaction. Again, he assured me, everything was on the up and up.

I gave him $5000. Later I borrowed $5000 from a friend, and $2000 from another friend. The total was $11,000 as I held back $1000 to pay the grocery bill. Let me repeat, my friends, who are not on The Washington Post, made their arrangements with me. They had never heard of Ambrose. I could tell them little as I didn't know about the stamps or the "purchasers."

This was around October 1. Ambrose promised me the pay-off in a month. Around November 1 he started to give me one excuse after another, but he promised me everything was in order. At one point he told me that he had completed my first $5000 "sale," but he had reinvested it—$7500—since he had been unable to contact me. He told me my $5000 would be built up to $11,250 at the 50 percent profit rate. He was sure I would have wanted it that way.

Then came several more weeks of alibis. It was always "tomorrow" for the payoff. In the week preceeding Thanksgiving, Ambrose gave me three payments of $2000, $3000 and $2000, a total of $7000. That reduced what he promised me from $20,250 to $13,250.

A week later Harold was back at me to "reinvest." He said a mistake had been made in stamps sent to his purchaser. The purchaser, he said, wanted his full order of a certain stamp and I'd have to put up some money to purchase the wanted stamps or else there might be a long delay. I put up $4000, reluctantly by that time, $2500 from the second friend, and $1500 of my own.

This was to have been an overnight transaction—just enough money involved, Harold told me, to complete the deal. But hours went into days and days into a couple of weeks. But the postal official showed me a $20,000 check that calmed down my uncertain feelings. The amount he owed me was now back to $19,250.

However, I had agreed to give Harold 10 percent of the gross profit to help pay his expenses incurred in "selling" the stamps. So we rounded off the amount he owed me at $17,000. On the first transaction, in fact, he had given me $9600 and I gave him $300, or 10 percent of the $3000 profit.

Arond December 15 Harold gave me $9000 in cash. He promised the remaining $8000 in a day or so. That day hasn't arrived. I then paid the people I borrowed from at the 25 percent rate, $6250 to one and $3125 to the other.

All in all, I put up $21,600 by turning over the original $6600 several times. In return, I received $25,300, a net profit of $3700. My friends received $2875 of it; one got $1750, the other $1125.

My net was $825 and it came harder than the hoeing I did of Missouri cornfields at 10 cents an hour when I was a kid. But I'm thankful I got out as well as I did financially.

On several occasions after that Harold asked me to "reinvest." I declined.

In our transactions, Ambrose explained that he was borrowing money from me. However, he did give me receipts signed by himself on Postoffice stationery for the purchase of so many stamps for my "protection." He said I'd be able to get the stamps from the department or that I would have a claim against his estate if anything happened to him.

Ambrose told me time and again that I was the only person participating with him in the stamp deals. I had no reason to believe anyone else was involved. The only name he mentioned to me as a stamp purchaser—and he did it in the vaguest sort of way—was of a Wilmington duPont.

But now, postal officials say that Harold made only three recent stamp purchases—purchases, incidentally, anyone else could have made. They say that a score of people were involved and more than $400,000 passed through his hands—about $250,000 unaccounted for. This latter sum, apparently, was put up in December by wealthy individuals. Officials believe he was borrowing from Peter to pay Paul, the age-old confidence game, when his house of cards caved in.

Some postal people suspect that Harold lost much of the money loaned to him at the races. Perhaps he did, but I never heard him once mention the races. At any rate, postal officials point out he violated no postal laws.

But I will agree on this—that Harold is a most persuasive individual. And I share the thought of Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) that this is a tragic case. Live and learn.

Ambrose Hires Lawyer, Will Tell Stamp Story

Harold F. Ambrose, key man in a suddenly deflated $400,000 stamp buying and selling operation, has retained an attorney and expects to give his side of the story shortly.

Late Wednesday, Ambrose, 38-year-old resigned special assistant to the Postmaster General, employed Edward Bennett Williams, Georgetown University Law School professor.

Williams accompanied Ambrose to a lengthy session with the Postoffice Department investigators yesterday morning and conferred with him in the afternoon.

J. H. Marks, inspector in charge of the Chicago Division, has joined Col. Richard E. Eggleton, inspector in charge of the New York Division, in the department's investigation.

Department officials confirmed the listing in The Washington Post yesterday of Henrik Mannerfrid, New York exporter, and Bruce Livie, Baltimore auto dealer and racing stable owner, as losers in the Ambrose stamp deal.

They said they had interviewed a local auto man "who lost on the deal," but were unable to learn the name of his backer. The Post yesterday disclosed Joe Adonis, self-styled New York City gambler, invested in the plan, acting through a middleman in the local automobile business.

A Postoffice Department official said the investigation, expected to be completed in a week to 10 days, is being carried on only by the department—not by the Federal Bureau of Investigation or the Bureau of Internal Revenue, as some reports have stated.

The FBI helped start the Postoffice inquiry, however. A prospective investor talked with his attorney before putting up any money and the attorney asked the FBI if the plan was legal. The agency informed Postmaster General Jesse M. Donaldson.

Motorist Held For Grand Jury In Boy's Death

The driver of an auto that struck and killed a 12-year-old Arlington boy January 27 on Lee blvd. was held yesterday for grand jury action on a manslaughter charge.

But at the same time, Judge Hugh Reid in Arlington County Court added his voice to others calling for traffic lights on Lee blvd., in the vicinity of the fatal accident.

The victim was Fred Lehman, an eighth-grade student at Thomas Jefferson High School. He had left a school bus and had stepped from a safety island into the highway when he was struck and instantly killed.

The driver was James Walter Ford, 37, of 337 I st. sw. Several witnesses testified he was traveling at excessive speeds before reaching the scene of the death.

Fred's father, Howard W. Lehman, assistant scoutmaster of Troop 148 of the Arlington Methodist Church, had written—last spring—to the Virginia Highway Commission asking for the traffic light.

"Are we going to have to wait," he queried at that time, "until a child is killed to have some action?"

Judge Reid noted at the hearing yesterday that traffic lights have been requested, and said, "It looks to me as though a light is badly needed."

Gallinger Turns Away Patient; Gets Him Anyway

A man who unsuccessfully sought admission to Gallinger Hospital's alcoholic clinic yesterday, got into the hospital finally, but a different section. Police said they picked up Silas H. Singleton, 23, of Hagood, S. C., at 12th and E st. se., in a Gallinger Hospital ambulance.

A few moments before, it had been reported stolen from the emergency room door. Police booked Singleton, then sent him to the hospital for mental observation. He told them, they said, that he "merely wanted to go for a ride."

Naval Observatory Shift Voted in Bill

The Senate yesterday approved a multi-million dollar military construction program which includes relocation of the Naval Observatory from Washington to Charlottesville, Va. This would permit a start on the long-delayed hospital center on the present observatory site here.

The Charlottesville item was part of the $503,000,000 public works bill, of which $29,437,500 will be spent on 15 military installations in the District, Maryland and Virginia.

The bill sets aside $8,500,000 for relocation of the observatory, including erection of new buildings. The old site between Massachusetts and Wisconsin aves. nw. will then house Episcopal, Emergency and Garfield hospitals as the start on a 35 - million - dollar Washington Medical Center.

Post Photographs Cited

Senator Millard Tydings (D., Md.), who managed the bill on the floor, cited housing conditions in the Quantico, Va., area as a compelling argument for favoring the measure. He called the Senate's attention to photographs which appeared in last Monday's Washington Post on the Quantico situation. The bill made no provision for Quantico, however.

After prolonged debate, the Senate specified that the average cost of houses for service families should not exceed $14,750, including site development. As introduced the ceiling figure was $16,500.

The original measure recommended by the Senate Armed Services Committee last August called for total outlay of about $635,000,000, but Tydings offered a substitute on the floor cutting the figure to 503 million dollars.

Neville G. Hall, Jr., Heads Alexandria Cancer Drive

Neville G. Hall, jr., Alexandria attorney, has been named chairman of the city's 1950 cancer fund campaign, it was announced yesterday.

Hall

Hall was selected by Judge James R. Duncan, of Alexandria Civil and Police Court, who is president of the Alexandria Chapter, Virginia Cancer Society. In accepting the post, Hall said the city's campaign for funds to combat the disease will open April 1. Plans to make the drive a success are being formulated, he said. No quota has been set for this year as yet.

Hall, who lives at 2703 King st., is a Marine Corps veteran and a graduate of the University of Virginia Law School. He was formerly law clerk to Judge Albert V. Bryan, of Federal District Court, Alexandria.

British Convict Skipper of Sub On Which 64 Died

Chatham, England, Feb. 9 (AP).—A naval court-martial tonight convicted Lieut. Charles P. Bowers of negligently endangering his submarine, the Truculent, which collied with a Swedish ship January 12 and sank with a loss of 64 lives.

The court acquitted Bowers on a more serious charge—that of negligently or by default losing his ship. He was sentenced to be reprimanded severely.

Bowers was charged with altering the course of the sub when the rules of the road at sea required the Truculent to maintain her course; with failing to reduce the sub's speed promptly, and with failing to make a sound signal.

Rider to Keep Rent Controls Near D. C. Adopted in Virginia

Quantico" prompted him to offer the amendment, although he "would like to see every string cut which Virginia has tied to that Government in Washington leaning toward socialism," Moncure said.

Navy and Marine Corps personnel from Quantico testified at a public hearing last week that an "appalling" situation exists near the Marine base, where there is still a severe housing shortage.

Delegate Armistead L. Boothe championed the cause for "local option" repeal of controls in his home city of Alexandria.

Witnesses from Arlington and Alexandria testified "to a man" before a joint general laws committee public hearing last week that removal of controls should be left up to the localities near Washington, he recalled.

Delegate Edwin Lynch, of Fairfax, obviously referring to the Administration bill to zeize coal mines in an emergency, asked proponents of the repeal measure:

"If we decontrol rents to the extent a person loses his home, would he (Delegate John B. Boatwright, patron of the repeal measure) be willing for the state to go into the rental business?"

Delegate Robert Whitehead of Nelson, apparently clinched the amendment when he said it would be "a slap in the face" to the Northern Virginia delegation to refuse their request.

"Talk about local self-government," Whitehead continued. "Mean what you say or swallow your words."

Boothe replied to Whitehead that the argument was "a matter of principle" in which there was "nothing personal." If the amendment were rejected, he added, he would not consider it "a slap in the face.

Whitehead, the chief opponent of the Democratic "organiztaion" in the House, recalled that "those of us from rural areas had to go to the aid of northern Virginia when they wanted daylight saving time."

He contended that the nearby Virginia area was closely linked "with the economy of the District of Columbia," and therefore different from any other part of the State.

Moncure made an impassioned plea for his amendment to exempt Prince William County from repeal, saying he was "not unmindful of what happened at Iwo Jima during World War II."

"I am not going to stand here and permit those heroic men to be crucified on an altar of gold and riches by landlords who have absolutely no conscience," he declared.

If controls are abolished at Quantico, Moncure said, "there are some landlords who are going to put rental up just as high as the traffic will bear."

Among those opposing the amendments were Delegate Paul Crockett, of York, an "organization" wheelhorse, and Julian H. Rutherford, jr., of Roanoke.

Crockett argued that the question was whether to retain "socialistic rent controls" anywhere in Virginia or to permit "individual freedom and initiative" in housing.

Rutherford said he doesn't believe "the citizens of Virginia should subsidized employes of the Federal government" by keeping rent controls on property near Washington.

Boothe replied that it was simply a problem of "whether you feel it advisable to do it on a State level entirely or leave us the local option provided under law."

Repeal by the General Assembly of the State rent control law makes it mandatory that ceilings be removed by the Federal Housing Expediter.

Present law permits governing bodies of cities and towns to pass repeal resolutions, which must be approved by Federal authorities.

Or controls can be lifted upon recommendation of local rent control advisory boards with concurrence by the expediter in Washington.

With passage of the amended bill—a foregone conclusion in the House Friday—the question arose today on its fate in the Senate.

Senator Andrew W. Clarke, of Alexandria, expressed surprise that the amendment had been offered without his knowledge. He said he was previously committed to abolition of all controls, but would have a statement on the amendment after conferring with his constituents.

Senator Charles R. Fenwick, of Arlington, said he expects to promote the bill as amended in the Senate.

Ensign Plotted Course of Mo interrupted training cruise to Guantanamo Bay.

Ensign E. R. Harris, 23, of Norfolk, told the court he plotted the battleship's course from the time she sailed from the naval base until she grounded a mile and one half off Old Point Comfort. He said he had been assigned as the ship's assistant navigator by the operations officer or the navigator, he could not remember which.

Defendants in the proceedings are the Missouri's skipper, operations officer and navigator. They are Capt. William D. Brown, Comdr. John R. Millett and Lieut. Comdr. Frank G. Morris.

Under questioning by the judge advocate, Lieut. Comdr. M. J. Bradbury, Harris said neither Millett nor Morris had asked what navigating experience he had had. He added that he believed himself competent to discharge the duties of an assistant navigator.

His previous experience in plotting a ship under way was on a trial run the Missouri made off the Virginia capes last December 22-23, Harris said. He testified he is a graduate of Villanova College where he completed a naval reserve officers training course.

Harris said that about two days before the grounding he and Morris had examined a chart on which the ship's predetermined course had been laid.

He did not see any red "danger bearings" on the chart, he said, and no one indicated to him the ship should not pass north of any particular bearing or landmark.

He testified he did not see, before the grounding, a paper containing instructions on how to run a secret naval electronics recording range, situated beside the main channel. The Big Mo ran aground while attempting to run this range.

Testimony that conflicting advice was given Brown by Millett and Morris came from Lieut. E. D. Arnold, who was officer of the deck when the ship stranded.

He said Morris made "frantic" recommendations the ship be turned to the right while Millett was advising Brown "there is plenty of water to the left of the (range) buoy."

The Third Time The Anti-Trust Lawyers Were Wrong!

What Has Gone Before

Today's ad is the third in a series telling about times the anti-trust lawyers made serious and damaging charges against A&P that the courts decided were not true.

In the first ad in this series we told you about the time the anti-trust lawyers charged that A&P, and other good American citizens, conspired to fix the price of bread in Washington.

These charges were false.

That was the time Federal Judge T. Alan Goldsborough instructed the jury to bring in a verdict of "not guilty".

It was the time he said to the anti-trust lawyers:

> "If you were to show this record to any experienced trial lawyer in the world, he would tell you that there was not any evidence at all.
>
> "Honestly, I have never in my over forty years' experience seen tried a case that was as absolutely devoid of evidence as this. That is the honest truth. I have never seen one like it."

But that was not the only time the anti-trust lawyers made such serious "allegations" against A&P which were false.

In our second ad we told you about the time in Wilson, North Carolina, they charged A&P's fresh fruit and vegetable buying subsidiary, and other good American citizens, with conspiring to fix and depress prices paid farmers for potatoes in North Carolina, Virginia and Maryland.

Here again, as in the Washington bread case, the charges were false.

This was the time Federal Judge C. C. Wyche directed the jury to bring in a verdict of "not guilty".

It was the time he said to the anti-trust lawyers:

> "I have studied this case from the very outset. In my opinion there is no testimony produced from which it can reasonably be inferred that the defendants entered into a combination to depress or lower the price of potatoes.
>
> "I might say that I never tried a case in my life where a greater effort, more work, more investigation had been done, combing almost with a fine-tooth comb to gather evidence, as was done in this case.
>
> "But, as was said a long time ago, you can't make brick without straw, and you can't make a case without facts."

So here were two cases in which the anti-trust lawyers made seriously damaging charges against A&P, in which the judge decided that there were no facts to support those charges.

Today, we want to tell you about the third time—this time in Dallas, Texas—the court decided against the anti-trust lawyers.

Is it a crime to give people more good food for their money?

For 90 years A&P has devoted all its energies to this end.

For many months now the anti-trust lawyers from Washington have been giving stories to the newspapers, making speeches and talking over the radio about this company.

They have been making serious and damaging allegations about the methods that enable A&P to give its customers better food values.

We have already told you about other times the anti-trust lawyers made charges against us that were proved utterly false in court.

In the left-hand column on this page you can read what the federal judges had to say about those two cases.

Now we are going to tell you about the third time a federal judge decided against the anti-trust lawyers.

The Dallas Anti-Trust Suit

In 1942 the anti-trust lawyers went out to Dallas, Texas, 1,400 miles from the homes of most of the defendants, and instigated criminal charges against A&P.

About this case one thing was sure.

Their previous experience did not deter the anti-trust lawyers from making more inflammatory and damaging allegations, just as they had done before.

They made practically the same allegations they are making today.

Federal Judge W. H. Atwell ruled that the case should not even be tried. He said that the indictment contained inflammatory statements that he would not permit to be presented to a jury.

Judge Atwell said to the anti-trust lawyers:

> "If I thought I was presiding over a court and that I might have to sentence some person because he was a great big fellow, or because he was a Lilliputian, I would feel like resigning. God knows we don't want it ever to occur in America that the size is going to determine whether a man is guilty or innocent."

Judge Atwell also said to the anti-trust lawyers:

> "If the indictment is not good then it is better to find out before an expensive trial than it is after an expensive trial. I do not think it is good, and thinking that, it is my duty to sustain the demurrers and motion to quash."

In short, Federal Judge Atwell threw the anti-trust lawyers and their case right out of his court.

So that makes three times that the anti-trust lawyers made damaging allegations against A&P. In two of these cases federal judges said they were all wrong. In the third case a federal judge said the indictment was inflammatory and he would not even permit the case to be tried.

The anti-trust lawyers were not satisfied with the Dallas decision.

Neither were they satisfied with the two other decisions in which federal courts administered stinging rebukes to them.

They were still determined to destroy A&P.

In our next ad we will tell you how they continued their campaign in this case in the Circuit Court of Appeals and subsequent proceedings.

We will show you how, once again, they disagreed with the courts.

Everything that has happened since this suit was filed proves that the American people don't want A&P destroyed.

A deluge of letters from people in all walks of life and thousands of editorials in newspapers and magazines convince us that the public has faith in A&P.

The housewives of this nation, whose patronage has made this company big, are buying from us in increasing numbers and increasing volume.

Our suppliers, whom the anti-trust lawyers allege we have exploited, are rushing to our support.

Labor leaders, mindful of the fact that A&P employees enjoy the best wages, hours and working conditions, are taking a stand against the suit.

Even many of our good competitors, who the anti-trust lawyers allege are hurt by our competition, have taken ads to tell the public that they don't like this attack on A&P.

All this indicates that the American people realize that the suit to destroy A&P is really a suit against efficiency, against low prices and against real competition.

Apparently most Americans do not want to let the anti-trust lawyers in Washington blow the whistle on any businessman who does a better and more efficient job and grows big in the process.

No one can make them believe it is a crime to try to sell the best quality food at the lowest possible price.

Hume School Condemning Plea Denied

Arlington Circuit Court Judge Walter T. McCarthy yesterday denied a request by the county school board that he set aside a recent condemnation commission's award on a proposed site for the new Hume School.

The commission awarded Mrs. Frances Lee Sickels $8250 an acre, or a $54,945 price for an undeveloped 6.6-acre portion of the total 8-acre site at 24th and S. Nash st., Arlington.

The school board's attorney James H. Simmonds maintained the price set was "excessive," and objected to introduction of evidence of the sale value of improved lots in the subdivision which includes the Hume site.

Robert Ryland, Mrs. Sickels' attorney, contended the price was fair for the land in the exclusive Club Manor Estates subdivision.

School Board Chairman Mrs. Elizabeth Campbell said yesterday the board would have to confer with its attorney before deciding whether or not to appeal the Circuit Court decision.

In any event, construction of the new Hume School on the 24th st. site appeared likely.

Lee Resigns as Member of School Board Appeals Committee

Adelbert W. Lee yesterday resigned as a member of the complaints and appeals committee of the Board of Education because of his membership on another board committee.

Lee is chairman of the board's personnel committee, which recommends action to the full board on personnel recommendations by the superintendent of schools..

In his letter of resignation, Lee said that as a member of the complaints committee, he was in the "unique and untenable position" of reviewing his own actions as a members of the committee on personnel.

Action on the resignation was deferred until all members of the board were present.

One other member of the board, John H. Wilson, is a member of both committees. He is chairman of the complaints and appeals group.

All members of the board are members of at least two committees and several hold positions on three.

At the meeting, the committee took under advisement two complaints.

Mrs. Marguerite Williams, associate professor of social studies at Miner Teachers College, contended that her credentials were not properly credited in an examination for the post of chief of the division of social studies at the college.

Dr. Garnet C. Wilkinson, first assistant superintendent in charge of Negro schools, asked that the complaint be disallowed by the committee.

Joseph R. Thomas, former engineer at the Parkview School who was suspended after being fined $100 for assault and battery following a stabbing near Colton's Point, Md., asked that he be reinstated as a school employe.

Virginia Gets Bill to Give Free Textbooks in Schools

Richmond, Feb. 9 (AP). — Five members of the House of Delegates, headed by Republican J. M. Smith, of Lee, dropped in a bill at today's session of the General Assembly to require all city and county school boards to furnish free textbooks to elementary school children.

The bill, which had three Republicans and Delegate T. L. Kessinger, of Alleghany, as copatrons, would appropriate enough money from the State treasury to accomplish this.

Bill Passed 30-2

Meanwhile, in the Senate, members passed, 30 to 2, the Moses-Warren-Palmer bill permitting formation of non-profit telephone cooperatives.

The Senate took this bill out of its order in a quiet session for the day and it found two dissenting votes cast by Senator Robert Y. Button of Culpeper, and Senator Charles W. Crowder, Richmond.

Button said before the vote was taken that he would vote against the bill because he was not in favor of Federal Government financing it would entail.

National Resources Bill

Also taken up out of order and passed was the Gray-Bird-Norris-Goode joint resolution providing for a commission to study the taxation of natural resources and the effect of such taxation on the development of such resources. This resolution was one result of the report in December of the State Tax Study Commission.

The Senate adopted a resolution to cut off the introduction of regular bills at the end of February 20. Excluded would be finance bills, local bills and bills sent down by the Governor.

Continuing Waltham Plant Held 'Vital'

Chairman Hubert E. Howard of the Federal Munitions Board said yesterday continued operation of the Waltham Watch Co. is "vital" to national defense.

Howard outlined his views in a letter to Harley Hise, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corp., for consideration in regard to Waltham's application for a loan.

However, President Truman said at his news conference that the Government has done all it possibly can for the firm.

Waltham closed its doors last week because of financial difficulties.

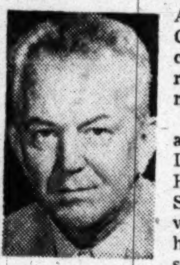
Dr. Small Wins Chemistry Prize

Dr. Lyndon Frederick Small of 8950 Green Tree rd., Bethesda, will receive the 1950 Hillebrand Prize of the Washington Section, American Chemical Society, it was announced last night.



Dr. Small

Head chemist at the National Institutes of Health, Dr. Small has devoted much of his life in a search for a substitute for habit-forming morphine.

Dr. Frederick D. Rossini, of the National Bureau of Standards, made the award announcement last night at a section meeting at Catholic University.

The winner, Dr. Rossini said, was specifically cited for his "outstanding contribution to the chemistry of alkaloids," that class of compounds which include such powerful drugs as morphine, quinine, strychnine and cocaine.

A completely satisfactory substitute for morphine has yet to be found, but present-day progress in that direction is largely credited to Dr. Small. Chief of the new compounds prepared by Dr. Small and his associates is metopon, now in use both as a painkiller and in morphine addiction.

Dr. Small, 52, was born at Allston, Mass. He was educated at Dartmouth and Harvard.

Since 1939, following a teaching career, he has worked in scientific research for the Government, including wartime research on anti-malarial drugs for the National Research Council.

The 1950 award will be formally presented to Dr. Small in dinner meeting on March 9, at Hotel 2400.

Unconstitutional?

Amputee's Suit Hits at Loyalty Test

A legless war veteran challenged the Government's loyalty program as unconstitutional in a suit filed yesterday in District Court.

James Kutcher, 37, said he was fired from his Veterans Administration job in Newark, N. J., because of his membership in the Socialist Workers Party. The suit asks the court to restore him to his job.

Joseph Rauh, jr., of Washington, one of Kutcher's attorneys, described the case as "an almost perfect example of what's wrong with the loyalty program."

Kutcher said he never denied membership in the Socialist Workers Party, which is on the attorney-generals subversive list.

But he declared he was refused a hearing on whether or not the party actually advocates violent overthrow of the Government.

"The Socialist Workers Party does not advocate violence," Kutcher said at a press conference in the Washington Hotel. "I never practiced violence except when in the Army—and then at the behest of the United States Government."

Kutcher lost both legs in an action at St. Pietro, Italy, in October, 1943.

Describing his client as a "victimized veteran," Rauh said he himself was "violently opposed to everything the Socialist Workers Party believes in—except freedom."

"Mr. Kutcher," the attorney said, "is as opposed to Soviet Russia as anyone in this room."

14 Injections of Wonder Drug Put Heart Patient on Feet

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

A 17-year-old Frederick, Md., youth has walked to the movies twice since last Friday.

Jesse

That's not unusual in itself, but this youth is Jesse C. Ramsburg, jr., who for years has been too crippled and listless to attempt such things.

A shot of ACTH, or rather a 13-day course of 44 injections of the wonder-working drug at Children's Hospital here brought the change from a chronically bedridden victim of rheumatic heart fever to the now almost too energetic life.

"We have to watch him carefully to keep him down," his father, a Frederick postoffice employe, said yesterday. "He can walk faster than I can. His appetite's better; he's sleeping better, and his nervous condition has lessened."

After the tretament course, begun two days after Christmas, the youth convalesced at the Christ Child Home, Rockville, Md., before his return home. He still must go back for monthly checks at Children's Hospital in the research treatment program sponsored by the National Institutes of Health, Bethesda, Md.

His doctors, with the usual caution on results from new treatments, say some clinical improvements have been noted from laboratory tests. For the most part, however, the benefits are symptomatic, they said.

Young Ramsburg is on a strict activities and dietary schedule, his father reported yesterday. He arises at 6 a. m., breakfasts, and walks considerably. In the afternoons, he takes a daily nap—because the schedule calls for it.

The theater is less than four blocks from his home, but the fact that he wants to go is what makes his father happy. He also wants to see the opening baseball game of the Washington Nationals this spring, his father said.

Truman Requests Resources Study In New England

President Truman asked Congress yesterday to authorize a 2-year study of land, power and water resources in New York State and New England.

He said it should tackle the problems of soil and forest conservation, floood control, pollution, water shortages and the development of low-cost hydroelectric power.

"These problems must be overcome if these states are to participate fully in the economic growth of our country," he said.

Mr. Truman made his recommendations in a letter to Vice President Alben W. Barkley. The President repeated his support of the St. Lawrence seaway and power project. He also called for development of the Passamaquoddy project in Maine and the redevelopment of power capacity of Niagara Falls.

The President proposed to set up a 7-member study commission to cooperate with an advisory group appointed by the governors of New York Connecticut, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine in considering a regional development program.

Hold-Up Men Get Gems Valued at $200,000

Los Angeles, Feb. 9 (AP).—A case containing diamonds valued at retail in excess of $200,000 was taken last night by two bandits who held up a jewelry salesman in his west Los Angeles home.

Milton Cohen, 35, told police one of the men posed as a messenger, then pulled a gun. A confederate entered the back door and the two searched the house, demanding "where is the stuff? We know you have it."

Out of Coma

First Words Spoken by Carey Girl

Patricia Anne Carey, eight, and so silent since hit by an automobile 36 days ago, has uttered her first few words.

And yesterday she crawled to the edge of her bed, brushed aside a curtain, and peered questioningly out of her window at the Washington Sanitarium, Takoma Park, Md.

Only last Monday, she showed clinical signs of coming out of the coma which held her for 32 days after she was struck at Sligo ave. and Piney Branch rd., Silver Spring, Md., as she walked to school from her nearby home, at 8 Hilltop rd.

Patricia's first word was a clear "No," Wednesday when her nurse asked her if she wanted more eggnog. Later that day she called her mother, "Mommy," and at night, she said "Good night, daddy," to her father, James B. Carey, secretary-treasurer of the CIO.

Yesterday, she had a fairly bright "Hello" when her physician, Dr. Vasilios S. Lambros, entered her room. She spoke other words, too, yesterday, but they were repeat words of anxious prompting.

Return of speech, meager as it has been, was encouraging to her parents, who had been warned the brain injuries may affect her ability to talk. Her doctors, however, emphasized that the extent of involvements cannot be determined until she is fully awake and can respond accurately to questions.

In the accident, the child suffered a fractured skull and injury to the brain which has caused paralysis of the right arm and right leg.

Recreation Workers' Pay Held Too Low

A warning that salaries for recreation workers in Community Chest - supported agencies are "scandulously" low was given yesterday to the Recreation and Group Work Section of United Community Services.

Philip Schiff, who is Washington representative of the National Jewish Welfare Board, and also chairman of the budget subcommittee for the Recreation and Group Work Section, made the statement. He spoke at a section meeting at the Jewish Community Center, 16th and Q sts. nw.

"Something will have to be done on salaries in the recreation field," he said. "They are scandalous. We cannot retain competent personnel to maintain the high level of youth services, at present salaries.

"And the future of our youth cannot be in incompetent hands."

Schiff announced that there will be only $24,800 more than in 1949 to allocate to 19 Chest-supported agencies in the recreation section.

He and Mrs. Franklin Startwell were elected new members-at-large of the section to serve the balance of the present planning year, ending in May.

9th Street Revival

News that "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" will be presented for a two-week run starting March 6 at the Gayety Theater is one more hopeful sign that Washington will not much longer be deprived of legitimate dramatic productions. The operators of the Gayety, having just closed it as a burlesque house because it was not producing adequate revenue on that basis, evidently feel quite confident they can make it pay by offering the customers more substantial fare. The continuing efforts of the American National Theater and Academy to come to terms with the Public Buildings Administration on a lease of the Belasco is another impressive indication that commercial producers recognize that Washington is, after all, a good theater town.

Whether the Gayety will continue to offer legitimate fare after its initial scheduled production remains to be seen. We hope so; and have no doubt that if it is fare of high quality, it will be abundantly supported by the Washington public. There is no reason to think of the Gayety and the Belasco as mutually exclusive enterprises. This Capital City of nearly a million and a half can readily sustain two theaters providing entertainment of high caliber. We wish both of them great success.

Halfway Point

In its second annual report the Organization for European Economic Recovery warns that when the Marshall Plan comes to an end in 1952 ECA countries will still be confronted by large, though greatly reduced, dollar deficits. However, it believes that the problem of achieving dollar balances can be solved by ECA countries with the aid of the United States and other nonparticipating countries. In fact the stress laid by the OEEC on the global aspects of trade recovery is a recognition of the fact that the Marshall Plan is only a temporary expedient and a partial remedy. It is not enough to expect west Europe to find new markets, to cut down dollar imports, and to liberalize trade and payments methods. Of equal importance is the willingness of the United States to render assistance in other ways than by direct grants-in-aid.

To specify: the dollar-earning drive of ECA countries cannot, as the OEEC report says, make its full contribution, "if the efforts of manufacturers and traders are impeded by high tariffs and arbitrary customs procedures." Nor can the participating countries "earn dollars if they are debarred, by one means or another, from offering their services in fair competition where they are most efficient, as in shipping and shipbuilding." Coupled with this admonitory advice to the United States is a reminder that this country as well as western Europe has a big stake in maintaining a high level of trade between the two areas.

Moreover, the OEEC concludes that in three years' time international investment should be stimulated, providing dollars for direct investment in ECA countries and also larger market outlets for European goods in undeveloped countries outside Europe that would enable them to earn more dollars. In short, OEEC appears to be counting rather heavily on the Administration's Point IV program to help solve the problem of Europe's dollar deficits without compelling ECA countries to cut dollar purchases too drastically.

The report indulges in some plain speaking on the question of European dollar export drives. It notes that even in 1938 western Europe's exports to North and Central America were only a seventh of her total overseas exports, while her imports from those areas were about one third of all imports. While emphasizing the necessity of increasing exports to dollar markets and cutting down dollar imports to narrow the dollar-trade gap, the OEEC points out that adjustments effected solely by cuts in the dollar imports of ECA countries would be disastrous from the European viewpoint and damaging to the United States. On the other hand, attempts to eliminate dollar deficits solely by increasing exports to dollar markets are simply "out of the question by 1953," and, for that matter, for the indefinite future.

The conclusion that we reach from a survey of the report is that while western Europe must intensify its efforts to increase domestic production, integrate its economy, build up an intra-European payments system, and find new market outlets for surpluses in other parts of the world, war-induced changes in the pattern of world trade have created an imbalance that cannot be corrected by Europe alone. This country must help to bring about needed adjustments. That help will have to be given partly by liberalizing our trade policies but largely in the form of an expansion of capital investment in foreign countries.

Bao Dai's Chances

Policy toward Indo-China is one of the toughest nuts that the State Department has to crack. Aid to the Vietnam government headed by the Emperor Bao Dai, for which the French are constantly pressing, has two phases. His sovereign regime in Viet Nam, together with the allied regimes in Laos and Cambodia, will soon be looking for economic help. This is something to which they have as good a title as any other country in Asia. The best aid in this respect is the kind of technical assistance in the agricultural regions which would enable the inhabitants to do better what they are already doing. In the main this is rice culture. But, with the country in turmoil, military support (additional to the support provided by the French) against the rebel Ho Chi-minh will doubtless head the list of requirements.

It is difficult to gain any clear estimate of the military situation in Indo-China. At present Ho is cooped up in the Tonkin Mountains, or the border region of Indo-China and China. He insists he is more nationalist than Communist, though he was once an agent of the Third International. He has about 70,000 guerillas, well armed and well supplied and well led, who are able, moreover, to give a good account of themselves in battle formation. The trouble is that the hitherto redoubtable Ho's influence is by no means limited to the relatively small territory actually under his control. His followers are everywhere, fomenting disorder and harassing Bao Dai's effort to create stability. Against Ho there are 70,000 Vietnamese under Bao Dai and 150,000 French troops, or, altogether, 220,000 men. Newspaper correspondents seem to be unanimously of the opinion that if the French were now to retire, Ho would triumph without much difficulty. He has already bled the French literally and financially in a seemingly endless struggle which has endowed France with a problem of the first magnitude in its domestic politics.

The wisdom of the course in Indo-China has long been under anxious discussion in France. After the war, France, like most of the colonial proprietors, miscalculated the depth of the anticolonial revolt in Asia. So France lagged in coming to terms with it—at least in concessions to nationalist clamor. A deal with Ho in 1946 dropped through on this account. Rebuffed, Ho proceeded to grow in strength and put on more and more of a Reddish coloration. At last the French have given Viet Nam a 90 percent independence though the argument in France over Indo-China has by no means ended. The argument centers on General Revers, former chief of staff. General Revers was recently discharged for allowing a report on Indo-China to fall into Communist hands in which he is said to have reported that no military solution is possible in Indo-China.

The report on which the Western powers seem to be relying is the one of Mr. Malcolm MacDonald, British Minister of State in the Far East. He has given Bao Dai more than a 50 percent chance to beat down the rebellion, presumably with the aid of his French allies. He assured the Colombo Conference of the Commonwealth nations that the soldiers under Bao Dai are fighting hard, that he has an increasing sum of popular backing, that this would grow markedly with recognition because Indo-China has less revolutionary ferment than desire for peace. This is an assurance that Bao Dai is not a mere puppet of France, but an authentic leader of Vietnamese nationalism. Hitherto it has been Ho who has been allowed to symbolize Vietnamese nationalism. French action in robbing Ho of this monopoly as nationalist leader is held to be certain to subtract from Ho's following and to add to Bao Dai's and to give him greater prestige.

Of one thing only can one be sure. And that is that any follow-up in military aid of the diplomatic aggression on the part of the Soviet Union or China—recognitionists of Ho's rival claims as Vietnamese ruler—will have to be challenged, and at once. For military aggression that is not resisted will inevitably gather momentum and create a general conflagration. This aspect of the Indo-China riddle is a thing apart. American arms intervention in anticipation of Russo-Chinese intervention would be wrong-headed, to say the least. Some light will no doubt be shed on Russo-Chinese intentions when Mao Tze-tung concludes his mission to Moscow. The question is whether he will agree to carry out Soviet strategy in Asia—to be used, that is to say, as a tool for trapping the Western powers in Asia so as to cripple them in Europe.

Coal And Bombs

The anxiety of the board of inquiry in the coal emergency to take the public into its confidence is in sharp contrast to the seclusive attitude of the Administration on the hydrogen bomb. Chairman David L. Cole of the coal board asserts: "We think the public is entitled either to have a contract to stabilize this industry, or at least to have an explanation of why the parties are incapable of making an agreement." This is indisputable. It is the people who suffer the consequences of the impasse between John L. Lewis and the coal operators in what has become a dangerously sick industry. If they can't have coal, they are entitled to know why.

But if the public interest in full information about the coal emergency is apparent, should it not be even more apparent in the issue of the hydrogen bomb? The matters are not unrelated as they affect the function of Government. Where coal is important to the national welfare, the hydrogen bomb may be quite literally a matter of life and death. Yet the Administration simply fends off all suggestions for a top-flight commission of public men to study the H-bomb in its setting, especially as this relates to America's responsibilities before the world. Inquirers are turned away with an implied "If you knew what we knew you wouldn't ask," or with the extraordinary statement of Secretary Acheson that he would not know where to find qualified men who are not already working in atomic energy or for the Government.

Hoover's FBI

In the present atmosphere of fear and consternation on Capitol Hill over the revelations in the Fuchs case, it is altogether likely that Mr. J. Edgar Hoover will get everything that he has asked—in more staff and more money. And considering the magnitude of the crisis now confronting us in relation to Soviet Russia, it is the part of wisdom to give it to him.

This, however, should not obscure the fact that we are combating one great danger by creating another. It is part of the terrible dilemma in which the conspiratorial character of communism (and its attraction on this account for so many contemporary minds) has plunged us. With each increase in the power of the FBI and each enlargement of its jurisdiction, we are taking a further step toward the creation of a secret political police. To say this is not to cast the slightest suspicion upon the motives of Mr. Hoover or the members of his organization or to impute to them any ulterior ambitions. It is not Mr. Hoover who is potentially dangerous to the survival of constitutional liberty; it is, rather, the apparatus that he directs today and the prospect that it could conceivably fall into the control of men of very different character.

Most students of the Russian Revolution recognize that the conspiratorial methods of communism, which are precisely what makes its Fifth Column so grave a danger, were developed and perfected in its contest with the Tsarist Ochrana. The history of that contest is a nightmarish story of infiltration and counterinfiltration. There were policemen in the secret councils of the revolutionists and revolutionaries in the hierarchy of the police. It is even possible that some of the conspirators, such as Roman Malinowski, became in the end uncertain in their own minds about which side they were working for.

The point is that it was no very difficult matter after the revolution for Felix Dzerzhinski to refashion the apparatus of the Ochrana into the terrible Tcheka, lineal ancestor of M. V. D.

Military Research

President Truman has filled a serious need in the nomination of William Webster to be the new chairman of the Research and Development Board. Mr. Webster, who is vice president of the New England Electric System, is not himself a scientist, but he has the sort of technical administrative experience that the RDB demands. He served as the first chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission military liaison committee, and he was chairman of the AEC's New England council. He is familiar with research and development problems through service as a consultant to the present board's predecessor, the Joint Research and Development Board.

It is no disrespect to the RDB's acting chairman, Dr. Robert F. Rinehart, to say that the board suffers from want of leadership—not so much in the matter of scientific judgment as in over-all policy determination. Since the resignation of Dr. Karl Compton in November, the lid on criticism has blown off. Most of it is directed at two defects in RDB's operations: the failure to provide an effective bridge between military and scientific viewpoints, and the tendency of the RDB secretariat to make plans without sufficient appreciation of the problems of scientists who are to supervise the programs.

Although the Research and Development Board is not itself an operating agency, its function as a scientific coordinator is of tremendous importance, and it scrutinizes the expenditure of great amounts of money. Essentially its job is to consult with military leaders and find out just what type of research is needed, then to make sure that the respective military research programs are adequate. For this it makes use of committees and panels in each area of scientific activity. These groups determine whether there is duplication of programs, whether the programs are meeting immediate and long-term objectives, whether contracts are sufficient. Yet scientists often have great difficulty, to cite just one example, in matching budget figures presented in terms of strictly military operations with the detailed breakdown of scientific problems to be solved.

Obviously such a job requires the closest sort of cooperation between the military establishment and the working scientists. It is significant that the Joint Chiefs of Staff recently have been providing an impressive amount of worth-while strategic guidance. It is also apparent, however, that the RDB needs an understanding administrator who can smooth out irritations in working arrangements and at the same time fit individual service projects into the picture of over-all research need. Now that the President has acted to provide such an administrator, we hope he will soon be able to find a head for the leaderless National Security Resources Board.

Ingrid Bergman

Every right-thinking, law-abiding citizen in the country goes along with Dr. Clyde W. Taylor, pastor of the Metropolitan Baptist Church, and Dr. Clarence W. Cranford of the Calvary Baptist Church in their open condemnation (from their pulpits) of the Swedish actress, Ingrid Bergman. So long as it suited her own convenience and her own selfish interests to do so, she accepted and enjoyed the freedom and protection of our conventions and laws. But without any thought for, obligation to, or duty within that society, or a gesture—even a dramatic and superficial one—of responsibility to or feeling for a legal daughter and husband, or for the conventions and laws of state and church, Miss Bergman places herself outside these protections, and then pleads that she be extended the protection of a law she defied, and granted the legal right to make her child legitimate. A. WOODWORTH.
Washington.

Are Washingtonians going to allow Keith's Theatre to show Bergman's picture Stromboli without protest? Let every decent Christian voice be raised in protest. We Americans do have basic moral standards and Bergman, Rossellini, Keith's cannot flout them and take our money too.
GERALD G. McVEIGH.
Washington.

* * *

Miss Bergman did exactly as she pleased, without regard to the conventions of the so-called uppety-up society of the world of today, and therefore, banning of the film Stromboli will never undo anything.

On the other hand, I don't remember having seen any ban on any pictures Errol Flynn appeared in, when he was in a scandal in Hollywood, or Charlie Chaplin's films or anybody else. So why raise such a big fuss about Ingrid Bergman and Roberto Rossellini? Haven't we learned to distinguish between people's personal viewpoints and art? WILLIAM OSTEN.
Washington.

It is with a sickening pain that I hear the droning of clergyman and lily-white souls condemn Ingrid Bergman. She is suffering quite enough. Did Mary Magdalene get stoned? Remember Hester, of The Scarlet Letter? JESSICA LEWIS.

Sex Crime Punishment

Within the last few days two men have been convicted in local courts for crimes of a parallel nature. Both men committed cruel "sex" crimes against very young children. One man received a sentence of 10-30 years; the other man faces death in the electric chair.

One does not necessarily defend the crime or the guilty party in questioning the severity of the punishment meted out to the latter. The severity of his sentence seems to violate justice and cast doubt upon the good sense of judge and jury. Moral righteousness against such a heinous crime is not the only criterion in deciding the punishment. The penalty should never be greater than the crime itself. Nor will such a severe penalty act as a deterrent to other twisted minds contemplating such deeds.

Let us not blind ourselves in the present incident to the underlying causes of this type of crime. A drastic penalty must not be our answer; especially when a constructive program for dealing with the "sex" criminal is lacking.

Before being sent prematurely to his ultimate judge, this man should be rehabilitated. If this proves impossible, then he must be prevented from returning to society. The electric chair is not the therapy to be recommended even though it is cheap and expedient.
RICHARD C. LEONARD.

Kibitzers

Walter Lippmann's excellent article, "The Soviets and the Senators" in your January 30 issue impels me to inquire if Senators Knowland and Smith would consider it wise to harangue with questions and unsolicited advice an able chess player who represented their side and whom they wished to win while he was engaged actively in a chess match with a skilled and astute opponent? Would it not be better for protagonists at such a moment to allow their man full time and concentration on the problems rather than to distract him, perhaps disastrously? Could such a "democratically" controlled master do justice to his game against a worthy opponent who was let alone?

And let us not forget there is a lot of similarity to chess in present international affairs and the Russians have produced some remarkable chess players indeed.

Shoppers' Fares

Operate a real shoppers' bus at frequent intervals, with special fares—maybe 5 cents a ride or four for 25 cents. There are doubtless many women who would pay 25 cents in one day for quick, to-the-door service from Woodward's to Kann's to Hecht's and around, who would not pay 13 or 15 cents a trip.

Advertise the service widely, not expensively. Placards announcing the route and schedule could replace the pictures of pretty young girls who say "I ride the Transit because . . ." (Anyhow, the company should get pictures of veteran Transit riders, saying something like "I've ridden Transit for 15 years, years, and look at me now!")

Sousa Principal

The Washington Post's traditional support of schools was never better vindicated than in its recent handling of the Sousa principalship affair. This association was genuinely concerned lest School Board action debase the educational coinage in other cities of the Nation.

Thanks to Miss Elsie Carper for excellent reporting and intelligent handling of our statement of January 19. High commendation is also due The Post for forthright editorial defense of professional merit as a basis for appointments and promotions. Let us hope that this basis will not be threatened hereafter.

Flaws In The Army Reserve Plan

I feel impelled to comment upon the article by John G. Norris in your issue of January 29 discussing the new "realistic" Army reserve plan. I am afraid that this latest plan will turn out to be just another failure, as have the previous ones, and for the same reasons.

So far, since reserve drill pay was authorized, units here have received pay for 28 drill periods, and it has been announced that only six drills will be paid for between January 1 and June 30, 1950. For the same period (July 1, 1948-June 30, 1950), National Guardsmen will get paid for 96 drills. Nevertheless, although reservists will get a maximum of 34 paid drills in that period, unless they attend 5 out of each 6 drills scheduled, they will be transferred to the inactive reserve. Guardsmen get two weeks' training with pay each year, reservists may get two weeks each year, but so far they have been lucky to get two weeks every other year.

So—when we try to recruit enlisted men we can only say: "You may get paid for some of the meetings you attend, and you will get two weeks summer training when funds permit, but we cannot promise you anything, because it is contingent upon the availability of funds. However, you will be required to attend 5 out of each 6 meetings scheduled, regardless of pay, or you will be placed in the inactive reserve."

No unit is allowed to have any equipment or uniform clothing unless it has a safe storage space therefor, with dressing space for the enlisted men, who are not allowed to wear their uniforms to and from the drills. Most large cities have Army installations within their limits or close by. With the war so recently ended, there is certainly plenty of equipment available somewhere. So, we can have the storage space at little cost, but we do not requisition the equipment because we have no enlisted men; we have no enlisted men because of lack of equipment, space, pay, etc.; and so on, ad infinitum.

Not mentioned as inducements in Mr. Norris' article, but pertinent, are the items of promotion and reserve retirement. The chances for promotion in the reserve (for enlisted men) are excellent, since there are practically no enlisted men in the units, you can promote qualified men just about as fast as they can be recruited. Even promotions lack flavor, though, when the pay remains uncertain.

As for reserve retirement, it is a pretty good thing for officers, but has little inducement for the enlisted men. I am a captain in the reserve, and if I can get promoted before I get over-age, I can qualify for reserve retirement pay. It appears I will get somewhere between $50 and $100 per month at age 60, depending upon promotion. However, for an enlisted man, his retirement pay will range upward from about $8 or $9 per month to at most $40 or $50, unless he has several years of full-time active duty. Most of the young men that are needed in the reserve cannot be persuaded by this bait.

I believe there are some solutions. One could be to forget about enlisted reserves and concentrate upon the retention of a group of qualified reserve officers, which was largely what we had before World War II. A second might be to resume the Citizens Military Training corps program, tying it in with the organized reserve and guaranteeing pay for attendance at drills. A third might be, as recommended by the Gray Board, to federalize the National Guard and lump the reserve program in with the ensuing organization.

Soviet Threat To Finland

By Marquis Childs

Fear Or Conquest?

WORD has reached Washington through diplomatic channels that Soviet Russia is shortly to take a new and ominous step. This will constitute one more move in what many are coming to believe is a pattern based on the Soviet conviction of inevitable conflict.

The Kremlin is reported ready to denounce the Russian treaty of peace with Finland. If this comes about, and able diplomats put credence in the report, it will have most far-reaching repercussions.

In the first instance, of course, it can bring stark tragedy to a brave and independent people who have survived two wars. Since the end of the shooting war, the Finns have achieved something very like a miracle.

They have tried scrupulously to live up to the harsh and exacting terms of the Russian-Finnish treaty that brought to an end Finland's ill-fated and ill-timed venture on the side of Germany. Most of the 250 million dollars in reparations levied by Moscow has been turned over ahead of schedule. The Finns have done this by working with the hard, unflinching tenacity that is a rare quality today.

But if the Kremlin decides to scrap the treaty, the whole achievement will be lost. The Finns will have little choice but to accept whatever new terms are decreed by the mighty power on Finland's eastern border, even though these terms should mean, in effect, Russian occupation.

* * *

THE AMERICAN view of Finland since the war too often has done less than justice to the Finnish people. With persistent and naive oversimplification, Finland has been rated an iron curtain country.

Actually that is far from the truth, as even the most casual visitor discovers. Abiding by the terms of the peace treaty, the Finns have maintained their independence in almost every respect. This calm, courageous independence exists even though, as was shown in the recent elections, about 20 percent of the voting population is Communist. On their side, too, the Russians have kept until now to a strictly correct attitude.

Just the other day the Finnish government politely but firmly denied Moscow's request to hand over individuals denounced by the Kremlin as "war criminals." It may well be that the Russians are reacting against this latest assertion of independence.

On the score of motivation for the latest Kremlin moves, such as the recognition of the Communist leadership in Indo-China, opinion differs. It is possible to see in these moves—and in the denunciation of the Finnish treaty if it comes—a definite and determined pattern of aggression and ultimate conquest.

But there is also an explanation in the theory that the men in the Kremlin are suffering from what amounts to a psychosis of fear. Given all the circumstances, it is not hard to believe that the latter could be true.

* * *

RECKLESS and irresponsible boasting, such as Secretary of Defense Johnson's declaration that we "could lick hell out of Stalin," and the wild speculation on the hydrogen bomb are calculated to feed such a psychosis. So are the kind of setbacks represented by Marshal Tito's thus far successful rebellion against the iron rule of the Cominform.

But whether it is calculated, step-by-step aggression or panic fear, the consequences can be the same. The end result can be the ultimate disaster of a third world war.

A growing fear that the end may be conflict and sooner than any but the gloomiest prophets had anticipated, weighs heavily on President Truman. It was the theme that dominated a recent Cabinet meeting. In the intimacy of his official family the President expressed his grave foreboding.

With this, among many in responsible office, goes a sense that time is running out. Yet that realization has not brought about any decision for what might be termed a last try—a dramatic effort to end the drift and rally the peoples of the world behind a plea for peace.

Some such move would help to convince Americans that our own Government has not permitted the frustration of recent years to paralyze initiative and hope. It would be proof that we do not suffer from either a fear or a hate psychosis. Even if it were proved a gesture futile insofar as practical results are concerned, it would still be of the greatest value.

Alternate President

Much is being said and written as to the effect that dropping an atomic bomb on Washington while Congress is in session would have on the nation. Would this be a remedy? Let the Constitution be amended so that an inactive alternate President and Congress could be elected to take over should the active Government be unable to function. Let the inactive President appoint a Cabinet and other key officials to serve in an inactive capacity until an emergency should arise.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

Acheson Directive

THE BACKGROUND of Secretary of State Dean G. Acheson's answer to Senator Brien McMahon is really more important than the foreground. And the central background fact, is that Secretary Acheson is now reviewing and reexamining all American policy, in every varied aspect, in the lurid light of the decision on the hydrogen bomb.

This process of reexamination and review directly originated in the White House discussions of the hydrogen bomb problem. Acheson himself then suggested to President Truman that a thorough reassessment of America's position in the world had come to be in order. The President agreed.

On Acheson's further suggestion, the President formally directed the two Secretaries, of State and Defense, to make the proposed reassessment with all possible speed, and to report thereafter to him. David E. Lilienthal wished to join in the task as chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, but was excluded. The President also voiced the opinion that although we were forced to proceed with making the hydrogen bomb, it would be intolerable for both the great hostile world systems to gain possession of this weapon that can destroy life on earth.

PRESIDENT Truman's apparent determination to prevent this ghastly situation from arising strongly suggests that atmosphere in which our world position is being reviewed at the State Department. Something of this atmosphere may also be guessed from the history of Acheson's Wednesday statement.

In brief, Acheson's staff were greatly disturbed by the country's response to the proposals by Senators McMahon and Tydings for disarmament talks with the Soviet Union. They urged Acheson to meet public sentiment halfway by at least indorsing the spirit of the McMahon proposal. He rejected this easy way, however, in favor of the statement which he himself prepared in outline during the morning, and then delivered at noon from notes.

The real meaning of this statement of Acheson's is vitally important to grasp. In effect, he said that it was no use trying to make written agreements with the Soviet Union, because the Kremlin always tears up any agreement that no longer serves the Kremlin's interests. Hence, he continued, the only way to world peace is to create conditions in which the hard facts of power will decisively deter the Kremlin from aggression.

This is strong medicine to spoon out to the woolly minded. For the sake of the optimists and vague idealists here at home, as well as for the sake of our record before the world, one last attempt at negotiating a settlement with the Kremlin certainly seems desirable. On the other hand, no really informed man can doubt that Acheson's analysis, grim though it be, is fully sustained by the record.

WHENEVER Russia has been halted since the war, it has only been by the hard facts of power. And in every single negotiation with Russia since the war, the Kremlin's minimum, irreducible terms have involved the sacrifice of positions absolutely vital to the West.

Reaching settlement by sacrificing absolutely vital positions is merely a form of slow surrender. After such a settlement, we, on our side, would go promptly, comfortably, to sleep. The Kremlin, on its side, would use the lull to complete all its preparations. It would then take advantage of the newly gained positions, in order to move irresistibly forward toward its grand final goal. These are always the sequels of appeasement.

Everything now depends, therefore, on whether Acheson and his staff, having faced so many other unpalatable facts, are also willing to face the fact that the world power balance is now rapidly shifting in the Kremlin's favor. This fact will not be changed by American possession of hydrogen bombs which we cannot deliver, but which the Soviets can use in surprise attack when they, too, possess them. If this further dark fact is also faced, the character of Acheson's ultimate report to the President can be clearly foreseen. He will have to demand an infinitely more powerful American effort in every field—military, political and economic.

The burden of choice is upon Acheson alone, since Secretary of Defense Johnson, who is also to report to the President, is still gaseously claiming he "can lick Joe Stalin" tomorrow morning. Yet if Acheson shrinks back, the American choice will be the choice of Britain in 1936, when Winston Churchill bitterly described the Baldwin government as "decided only to be undecided, resolved to be irresolute, adamant for drift, solid for fluidity, all powerful to be impotent." That choice can have only one eventual outcome.

Record of GOP Cited by Truman Ahead of Platform

President Truman apparently doesn't think much of the new Republican policy statement.

Asked yesterday about the Republican slogan, "Liberty against Socialism," Mr. Truman told reporters that he didn't understand it very well. He said he thought the Republican record speaks better than any GOP platform.

The President said that he was not considering Charles E. Luckman for the Atomic Energy Commission, or for any post. Luckman recently resigned his job with the Lever Brothers soap firm.

Mr. Truman said that Luckman already had a job—selling tickets for the Jackson Day dinner. He said he was doing an excellent job in this.

The President's Calling List

11:15 — Representative Wilson (D., Okla.).

11:30—President receives group of Methodist ministers.

Atom Policy to Be Unchanged

courage public discussion of the whole subject.

Mr. Truman advised the reporter who asked him about this to read the statement of Secretary of State Acheson on Wednesday.

"Do you agree with Senator McMahon," he was asked, "that this is the time for soul-searching on a Nation-wide basis with regard to atomic energy control?"

Approved Acheson Stand

Again he suggested a reading of Secretary Acheson's statement. He said he had talked it over with Acheson before the Cabinet officer read it to reporters.

Mr. Truman said then that if the reporters would read a little history, they would find that this Government's program had been a continuing one ever since the first request was made of the United Nations to control atomic energy and armaments of all kinds.

Our position hasn't changed a bit, Mr. Truman continued, and he pointed out that he had reiterated it a hundred times at his press conferences. Here he made the remark that there wasn't any use getting all steamed up.

Stands by Baruch Plan

He said that this country has been continuing all the time to create a peaceful situation, and that every possible effort has been made. Then came the statement that if we could get just one little bit of cooperation from the Soviet government we could get the job done.

Mr. Truman was asked if he was standing on the Baruch Plan.

The President said this country's position has never changed. The Baruch Plan, he went on to say, is just as good today as the day it was drawn up, and there is no reason to reconsider it.

A reporter wanted to know if the situation had not been altered by the fact that Russia now had the bomb.

Mr. Truman said it had not been altered in the slightest. In fact, he said, the Baruch Plan ought to be more useful now than in the beginning. Then, he said, we thought we were giving away something; now things are on an even keel, apparently.

"Is it your idea," he was asked, "that it ought to make the Russians more receptive?"

Russians Always Vote "No"

Mr. Truman said he couldn't answer that. He said he couldn't tell how the Russians felt except to judge by their acts in the United Nations. They vote "No" every time, he said, and added that he didn't think we have ever exercised the veto power.

"Does the Secretary's statement foreclose any change in the future of atomic controls?" a reporter asked, referring to Acheson's statement of Wednesday.

There is no reason for any change, Mr. Truman replied, adding that we are attempting to get international control of atomic energy and trying our best to get peace in the world that will be good for everybody. That, he said, is all we want, all we have ever wanted, and is the fundamental basis of our foreign policy.

'What about general disarmament?" a reporter asked.

That, the President said, was in the same category.

"Can they be considered together?" the reporter persisted.

No, Mr. Truman said, they could not.

The Chief Executive said, a little later on, that an atomic agreement and general disarmament went together, that they were both embodied in a United Nations resolution.

He said that if the world could get the atomic energy problem settled, there wouldn't be any trouble with the other.

Fenwick Park, Tyler Park, and Tremont Gardens, would be increased to 30 cents.

A trip from Washington to Vienna, or Tysons Corner, both in Zone 4, would cost 35 cents, and the inter-state fare to or from the towns of Fairfax and Oakton would be increased to 40 cents.

The fare increases were proposed following a wage award, retroactive to May, 1949, granted company drivers and maintenance men last September.

The bus line estimated the wage award would cost it $200,000 annually, and said it could not pay it without a fare increase.

The SCC has operated the bus company since November 2, to avert a strike.

In his finding yesterday, Williams said the fare increase should give the bus line a net operating income of about $230,000 this year, taking into consideration a 10 percent drop in passengers because of the higher fares.

During hearings which began late in November, Lester R. Conley, representing the Arlington County Board, objected the bus company would still be "$69,000 in the hole" in 1950, if the increase were granted. He asked that it be denied.

Williams said the company's claim it would lose $209,000 in 1950 without the increase was "somewhat overstated," and actually would be about $100,000, instead.

Anti-Red Law Reinstated

convicted under it, it will be time enough to consider the act in its application to particular circumstances and a particular defendant,' Judge Henderson said.

In a minority opinion, Chief Justice Ogle Marbury concurred with the majority but argued that the court should have ruled on the constitutionality of certain parts of the law.

The decision will be appealed to the Supreme Court, opponents of the law said yesterday.

The Ober Law was drafted by a commission headed by Frank B. Ober, Baltimore attorney. It passed both branches of the Legislature in March, 1949, with only one dissenting vote.

Another law was enacted April 3, making the Ober Law an emergency act, effective the day it was signed (April 22). This act prevented the Ober Law from being suspended until the referendum in November, 1950, legally forced by opponents of the law.

A test suit was filed April 27 by six college professors, a salesman, two teachers and a sculptor. A second test suit was filed May 18 by the chairman of the Communist Party of Maryland.

Judge Sherbow, hearing the test suits, declared the Ober Law "unconstitutional and invalid" on August 16.

Key provisions of the Subversive Activities Act of 1949, restored yesterday by the Court of Appeals:

1. Provide jail terms up to 20 years and fines up to $20,000 for knowingly advocating any act intending to overthrow the Government by force.

5 Years for Subversives

2. Provide up to five years and $5000 for knowingly being a member of "a subversive organization."

3. Provide for a special assistant attorney general to coordinate investigations by county grand juries into subversive organizations.

4. Provide loyalty oaths of all employes, except laborers, of the State or subdivisions, and of all candidates for public office.

Judge Sherbow ruled that the Ober law was unconstitutional because it violated the Maryland declaration or rights, the constitutional rights of free speech and due process of law, and because the law constituted a bill of attainder, personal punishment by legislative action without judicial determination.

Judge Sherbow also ruled unconstitutional the emergency act, calling it an ex post facto law.

Sherbow Reversed

Judge Henderson said the validity of the emergency act was properly before the court, but ruled that the act did not make the Ober law ex post facto.

"We think, however, none of the other provisions of the act are properly before us," he continued. "None of the complainants have been threatened with prosecution."

Chief Judge Marbury, however, argued that the Court of Appeals decision should have been more inclusive.

He put his stamp of approval on loyalty oaths of candidates for office and of teachers and the right of the State not to employ persons believed to be subversive. "It is an arrogant assumption," he said, "that a government cannot protect itself against the infiltration of those who desire to destroy it by force." One other judge concurred with Judge Marburry.

The chief judge said the complainants were entitled to know whether the Ober law is a bill of attainder. "I do not think it is, and I think we should say so," he said.

"We should not create any doubt that the people can adopt a policy . . . to combat actual danger," his opinion concluded.

weeks. Each car holds 50,000 pounds—about 850 bushels.

Members of Congress have been eating Canadian potatoes, while debating the high cost to both the taxpayer and consumer of the Government's price-support system. That cost has reached the staggering total of almost half a billion dollars for potatoes alone in four years. The potato cost this year is estimated at around 100 million bucks. That's more than the annual cost of Congress.

One potato man told The Washington Post last night he had sold "a lot of Canuck spuds" to eating places favored by members of Congress. When asked if these included the House and Senate restaurants, he laughed, and remarked: "What does a Congressman say in a time like this? No comment." He added that if they had been sold to such places they "would not be in their original sacks."

Last night Canadian potatoes, as well as Canadian rutabagas, etc., were piled high in the commission rooms of Clowe & Davis, 1217 Maine ave. sw., and the G. P. Iverson Co., 1213 Maine ave.

Canadian potatoes from New Brunswick, north and east of Maine's potato county, Aroostook, can be shipped to Washington and sold for 10 to 15 cents a 100-pound sack cheaper than from Maine. Canadian shippers must pay an inspection fee of $5 a car, and a customs duty of 75 cents per 100 pounds, that American growers don't have topay.

American potatoes are now supported at 60 percent of parity—the lowest amount Congress will permit. Last year the support was 90 percent of parity.

Even with this cut, Maine growers can get more from Uncle Sam than they can in the normal trade channels. The Government is now paying $2.15 a sack in Maine, dyeing the spuds blue, and dumping them on the frozen ground from which they were dug a few months ago.

Commercial dealers offer considerably less. Potatoes bring about $1.97 a sack in the commercial market at Presque Isle, Me. The freight to Washington is $2.03, including the 3 percent wartime excise tax still imposed. This brings the price to $3 in Washington. The wholesaler resells them for $3.50.

Canadian potatoes can be laid down in Washington for $2.85 to $2.90, including tariff and inspection fees.

Meanwhile, Congress turned from worrying about potatoes to worrying about Polish hams that are being imported into this country.

Representative Charles B. Hoeven (R., La.) yesterday asked Fred J. Rossiter of the Agriculture Department's office of foreign agricultural relations about rumors that Polish hams are selling here in competition with Hoeven's famous corn-and-hog State. He also wanted to know about the reported importation of Chinese eggs.

Senator Elbert D. Thomas (D., Utah) reported that Great Britain is interested in buying some of the 73 million pounds of dried eggs the Agriculture Department is now trying to give away.

College Spurns Spuds, Hits at 'Paternalism'

Madisonville, Tenn., Feb. 9 (U.P.).—Tiny Hiwassee College, with 200 students, tossed back the Government's potatoes today and said it could raise its own.

"Our college needs as much help as any institution, but we don't want that kind of charity," said President D. R. Youwell.

The Government has offered surplus potatoes to Tennessee colleges as a means of disposing of them.

"We'll either raise our own potatoes or buy them at the local market price," Youwell said. "We would like to take the lead in putting a stop to this sort of Government paternalism."

Erickson's Threats to Cut Keleher Links Told

Gambler's Wife Testifies Tygoon Angered by Her Part in Probe

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

Betting tycoon Frank Erickson once threatened "to sever his connections" with Washington Gambler John B. (Dapper Jack) Keleher, District Court Judge Charles F. McLaughlin was told yesterday.

Mrs. Anna T. (Dolly) Keleher, who is suing Dapper Jack for a limited divorce, made the charge in quoting her estranged husband. She said that Erickson was angered because she appeared before Prince Georges County officials investigating gambling last spring.

The Federal Diary today appears on Page 1.

In October, the Prince Georges County grand jury reported "generally satisfactory" control of gambling there.

Keleher, who had been a grinning observer throughout most of Mrs. Keleher's testimony, glared at her steadily whenever she mentioned Erickson. Previously, Keleher had described Erickson as a long-time friend and associate.

The 51-year-old Mrs. Keleher said that she received an angry telephone call from her 68-year-old husband soon after she went to Maryland to talk to authorities, she said, about gambling there.

"He (Keleher) said what was I trying to do?" "Was I going to expose all the gamblers?

"Erickson had gotten him over the phone and given him hell about it. If his wife didn't have sense enough he was going to sever his connections with Keleher."

She said that Keleher then continued:

"I call Erickson several times a day. I have to get that money back for layoffs. You are ruining my business. I can't get along without Erickson. I need his contacts."

Mrs. Keleher said she knew Erickson but couldn't give his present location but thought it was Passaic, N. J.

Mrs. Keleher contends that her husband left her in 1946 for the younger and trimmer Mrs. Dorothy Blake of the Dorchester House. She swears that Mrs. Blake helps Keleher in his gaming activities and travels with him to racetracks throughout the Nation.

The size of Keleher's enterprises, Mrs. Keleher said, was indicated by the following statement she said he made in 1948 over the telephone from Florida:

"He told me that you know I've made arrangements to take everything out of Washington and put it in safe deposit boxes in anonymous names all over the country. A fellow named Grossman has okayed me down here and I am working at the hotel and the racetrack."

Mrs. Keleher gets $100 a week separate maintenance, but says this sum is entirely inadequate. Keleher admits making $20,000 a year from his "investments" but Mrs. Keleher said that he netted $300,000 annually in his betting activity. Keleher claims he "sold out" and went "legitimate" in January, 1948.

Mrs. Keleher testified she often complained to her husband about the association with Mrs. Blake. Describing a telephone call to Keleher, Mrs. Keleher said that she implored:

"It's so humiliating. She's a shameless woman. You should have enuogh pride and respect for your home and me."

Couple Celebrates 70th Anniversary Today; 'Young'uns Keep a Body From Growing Old'

By Charles DelVecchio—The Washington Post

GRANDMA MARGARET ALICE HARLEY AND GRANDPA HENRY HARLEY
"I've never met another man I'd have looked at twice"

By Jean Reiff
Post Reporter

"I places my trust in the Lord. He has always taken care of us."

Grandpa Henry Harley, "going on 95," says that's why he and Grandma Margaret Alice Harley, "going on 90", are well and happy today and able to celebrate their 70th wedding anniversary.

"Course, we was always busy and working hard. And there was always lots of young ones around. With a big family of young ones, a body just can't grow old," he explained yesterday, his eyes twinkling.

With close to 200 descendants representing four generations around, Grandpa and Grandma Harley have never run out of young ones.

Always Children Around

First they reared 11 children of their own. Then they reared the 13 children of one of their sons after he died. They were in their 60s when they took over that family.

Neither they, nor their four living children, know exactly how many descendants they have. Putting their heads together, they decided yesterday there must be about 70 grandchildren, 108 great-grandchildren and 16 great-great-grandchildren.

"Course, we haven't seen all the younger ones. They's scattered all around. But I bet we'd know they was family anytime any one of them walked in," Grandma Harley declared.

Only a few Gray Hairs

"I feels about 19 again, Course, Grandpa there, he's got white hair. But me, now I've got only a few gray ones," she pointed out.

How did they meet so many years ago?

"Well, Grandpa and I has known each other just about all our lives. We're second cousins and we grew up together, out near TB in Maryland. Then when I was 19 and he was 24 we just decided to get married," Grandma Harley explained.

"It will be 70 years ago tomorrow. And you know, I've never during that time met another man I'd have looked at twice," she added with a giggle.

"There never was another girl for me but Grandma," he declared.

The Harleys, after their marriage, farmed for many years in Maryland. Then, about 40 years ago, they decided to try their luck in Washington. Grandpa Harley worked on different construction jobs here for many years. They lived in Southeast Washington until seven years ago, when they moved to their present address.

They Just Won't Rest

After the many years of hard work, they're supposed to take things easy now. But it's a full-time job for the family to make them rest.

Still spry and with perfect eyesight and hearing, both grandpa and grandma attend mass at nearby St. Stephen's Church every other day.

Grandpa loves to play solitaire and keeps abreast of daily events through the radio and newspapers. Grandma still loves to cook, and it's hard to keep her out of the kitchen.

Both are looking forward to the celebration tonight, when family and friends will come by to wish them lasting health and happiness.

"And then, we're going to start planning for our 75th anniversary, aren't we, Grandma?" Grandpa Harley asked, while he gave her a big hug.

Husband of Girl Who Saw Slaying Captured in Michigan

Evald (Red) Johnson, branded a killer by his wife's "eyewitness" confession to police here, was captured—without resistance—as he slept at a sister's home in Munising, Mich., early yesterday.

Johsson immediately repudiated his wife's statements that she saw him bludgeon to death a Texas oil-field expert June 22. He was held incommunicado pending extradition proceedings.

In her Washington jail cell yesterday, Mrs. Diana Jean Johnson, 18, was not informed of the arrest—which resulted from a story she told Park Police last Sunday.

Taken into custody Tuesday midnight when her story checked with details given by Amarillo, Tex., authorities, she gave her confession after only 5 minute's questioning. Wednesday she tried to take her own life, police said, by springing toward an unbarred fifth-floor window of Police Headquarters here.

Texas authorities tipped off Michigan State police and the FBI that Johnson, 29-year-old former steelworker, might be a Munising—his home town on the north shore line of Lake Superior.

Johnson and his slender, blonde wife have already been charged with murder in Texas. In Washington, Mrs. Johnson is held under a total of $40,000 bond for transporting a stolen car across State lines and unlawful flight to escape prosecution.

The FBI here said a fugitive charge was also being prepared for Johnson.

The fact that Mrs. Johnson didn't ask for an attorney yesterday, the FBI said, may indicate that she will waive extradition.

Mrs. Johnson's story to police was that the slain oil man, W. A. (Tex) Thornton, picked up her and her husband in New Mexico, and took them to a tourist camp near Amarillo. The slaying took place there.

The couple fled in Thornton's car to Dodge City, Kans., where Mrs. Johnson left her husband. Months of hitch-hiking through the South brought her to Washington in December.

Bandit Waits on Customer As Pals Rob Grocer of $100

Takoma Park police said the robbery was at the Hampshire View Market, 914 East-West highway.

Bernard Schuman, 45, of 4300 Russell ave., Mount Rainier, owner of the place, told police two of the men entered while the third remained in an old Packard sedan, bearing District tags, in which they all later escaped.

The two men thrust guns at him, Schuman told police, and took him to the back room of the store where one told him:

"If you'll be good to us, we'll let you get off light."

While they were there, Schuman said, a woman customer entered. One of the bandits went out, waited on her, and pocketed the money for her order. But, Schuman told police, the men did not touch the cash register.

The clerk-bandit returned to the rear, and then both left, warning Schuman not to "come out too soon." They passed the woman who was still in the store, Schuman said. Police reports did not contain her name.

Police broadcast a description of two of the three men as white and about 33 to 35 years old. One was about 5 feet 7 inches tall, weight 145 pounds, with gray eyes and a felt hat. The second was 6 feet 2 inches tall, about 175 pounds, dark complexion, wearing a blue-black shirt. There was no description on the bandit car driver.

Jaycees Told Of Home Rule Business Aid

Business stands to "suffer materially" unless home rule is achieved for the District, the Junior Chamber of Commerce was told yesterday.

District problems are becoming "so desperate" that they can only be met by "an effective, elected city council," Gerhard Van Arkel, counsel for the Senate District Committee, told the weekly Jaycee luncheon in the Burlington Hotel.

Van Arkel voiced a wide-ranging criticism of home-rule opponents.

"At a time when we are presenting democracy to the people of the world as the only real alternative to Fascism," he declared, "it strikes me as absurd that in the very heart of the Government we should be doing the exact opposite of what we advise others to do."

Van Arkel mentioned two reasons frequently given for opposing home rule.

The first is that national representation should come before local self-government. This reason he described as "phony."

The other is that Negroes may "take over" Washington. This fear he described as "utterly absurd."

Eugene Otto was named Jaycee man-of-the-month for December. Otto won the award for serving as chairman of the Horace Heidt show to raise funds for Jaycee youth welfare activities.

2 Burned G-Girls Reported Recovering

Two Government girls were recovering yesterday from burns received in an early morning fire at 1323 Monroe st. nw.

Described as being in good condition at Emergency Hospital was Maxine Wraalstad, 19, who suffered burns about her face, head and upper chest. Her roommate, Elenor Jermyn, 31, was released after treatment for slight burns.

Young Expects Crime Probers To Urge Bigger Police Force; Sees No Need for Tax Rise Now

Costly Program For Civil Defense Could Boost Rate; Surplus Predicted

Barring demands for an elaborate civil defense program here—a distinct possibility—District officials see no local tax hikes for some time to come, it was disclosed last night.

The Commissioners thus summed up a report on Washington's belt-loosening spending program for fiscal year 1951 in closed hearings last month before the House Subcommittee on District Appropriations.

Part one of the testimony, justifying spending requests for police, fire, schools, recreation, fiscal services, libraries, regulatory agencies and general administration, was made public yesterday.

Commissioner John Russell Young termed the record-breaking $119,124,875 city budget a "very honest, balanced" program. It foresaw a surplus of about six millions by June 30, 1950, a surplus due to be almost gone by the end of the following fiscal year.

Cuts Are Reported

Since these hearings, however, the House group reportedly has cut about six millions from the total.

To fight off the pruning knife, nearly every municipal official stressed the need for more economy and efficiency in the city services, and urged funds and equipment to conduct a baby Hoover Commission operation on the District government.

They also told Congress new procedures are in the works to round up more personal property and income tax evaders.

Young explained how a civilian defense set up might upset the budgetary and tax-levying applecart this way:

"Spadework is being done for civilian defense. It is very embryonic right now. The Army has done something and we have a little setup. We have done nothing. We may be called upon to do a great deal; we don't know. Now, that may have to go in a supplemental (appropriations request to Congress) . . . in the last war, I think we had to borrow two million dollars that carried us. But we paid it back. There may be some expense connected with civilian defense."

Sees Tax Need

Such an extraordinary development, Budget Officer Walter L. Fowler added, may necessitate seeking "additional legislation for increased taxes."

Most definitive step toward achieving more economy in city departments was Fowler's appeal for two topnotch "budget examiners" to attempt to "improve the effectiveness and economy" of District operations similar to the Hoover Commission report on the Federal Government.

Fowler told the subcommittee, "we (would) save many thousands of dollars."

He emphasized the field work would not "disturb" the departments nor create the impression the city heads were "building up a police organization."

On the revenue side, Tax Assessor Edward A. Dent had bad news for District residents now ducking tax rolls.

Punch-Card System

The city income tax division is adopting a punch-card system on local income tax returns, Dent said. Within "a few days" after the April 15 filing date, he explained, "we will have a complete punch-card set up on every person who earns a salary in excess of $1000 a year and lives in the District.' In the past, income tax records were compiled manually and involved about five months' work.

Another assist to Dents' campaign against income tax evaders, it was pointed out, is last year's Revenue Act requirement that all employes of District firms who live here must file W-2 information returns.

The tax assessor also disclosed his men are currently canvassing the area east of N. Capitol st. for those who have failed to file personal property returns.

The dollar-and-cents effect of the Senate-approved Washington home rule bill also came into this year's budget discussion.

Representative Sidney Yates (D., Ill.) asked Fowler if enactment of the suffrage measure would affect the city budget, and received this reply:

"I don't think there is any doubt about that—very materially. If you carry out the provisions of that bill, as I understand it, you would have a city council, instead of the council we have here on the Hill. You would have considerably more positions. You would have changes of positions. You would have a city manager. In the beginning, it would not be insurmountable.

"As far as finances are concerned," he continued, "I think we would have adequate money to provide for it in the beginning, but what it would be in the next 3 or 4 years, I don't know. We are debt free now, but not for long."

Fowler then admitted no one in the city government has made a study of what home rule might cost.

Other departmental testimony touched on these points.

Waldron E. Leonard, director of veterans services, testified many vets are buying G. I. homes as the cheapest means to find shelter. The housing problem for low-income veterans, he said, is "just as bad as ever." There is very little to rent in this town for less than $72 for one room, and $120 for two rooms, he told the committee.

Representative Yates sharply questioned District officials on presently low rents the city charges private interests for space at the Maine ave. fish stalls. Rentals, he argued, should be keyed to gross profits the firms are making at the municipally owned wharves. Young admitted the rents "are a little low" and indicated he would reexamine them when they come up for renewal next fall.

Justifying an appeal for three more lawyers in the corporation counsel's office, its head, Vernon E. West, said his office is "really the bottleneck of the District of Columbia government." He laid his increased workload to addition of three judges in District Court, thus stepping up the docket there, more statistical work in Juvenile Court and litigation arising from the sales tax.

ABC 'Sample' Explanation Satisfies Congressmen

Alcohol Beverage Control Chairman Alan W. Payne did some fast talking at the Capitol recently explaining a $500 item for "samples" in his annual budget request.

He assured curious Congressmen no "formal sampling" is conducted by his liquor license inspectors.

That word "sample" has been in the budget many years, Payne stated, and covers "expenses incidential to the visitation of inspectors to watch over this or that place over a whole night or a whole day." The Congressmen were satisfied with the explanation.

Capitol Crime Probers Shift Hearing to Dope Traffic Today

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

The Washington Post

Lieutenant Hartman — Inspector Storm

. . . testify on Capitol Hill

Washington's narcotics traffic will be up for attention of the Capitol crime probers at today's hearing.

Chairman James C. Davis (D., Ga.), of the special House committee on Washington crime and law enforcement, said he has shifted the schedule to take up the narcotics problem at 10 a. m. He explained that necessary witnesses will be busy elsewhere next week when they were to have been heard.

From time to time Washington has been ranked near the top in the list of "worst cities" from the standpoint of the dope traffic, officials pointed out.

Critical of Courts

The Treasury Department's Bureau of Narcotics at times has been critical of the courts for lenient sentences for drug law violators.

There were indications these issues may be brought up today, but attention also may be given to the 5 to 15-year jail term imposed last Friday in District Court upon James M. (Jim Yellow) Roberts, a leader in the drug underworld.

The sentence was given by Judge F. Dickinson Letts after he reminded Roberts of two prior convictions for narcotics law violations. Roberts' wife Evalina, 24, was given 16 months to four years after Roberts asked the Judge to "give my wife a break."

Davis said there will be morning and afternoon hearings today and tomorrow. He made this announcement after the second two-hour hearing of police officials, headed by Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent.

Attention was centered on police declarations they are not kept posted by the courts on the disposition of all cases the police present.

Barrett Makes Charge

A similar charge was made by Major Barrett about failure of the Parole Board to notify the police of the release of prisoners. This was promptly denied by Parole Board officials. The denial was understood to have been called to Barrett's attention as the hearing ended.

He declined to comment. An aide indicated the superintendent may correct the official record today.

The parole question came up when Committee Counsel Hyman I. Fischbach asked Lieut. Earl P. Hartman, in charge of police statistics, if his office gets reports of convicts released on parole or conditional release.

"No, sir," said Hartman.

Barrett spoke up to say that at times, not regularly, the detective office gets a notice from the Parole Board of a man having been placed on conditional release, but that months can go by before his department is notified.

Parole officials said their office sends the police two copies of a notice each time a prisoner is paroled or conditionally released from a District penal institution. The notice goes to the police the day the prisoner is let out, they said, one copy being sent to Inspector Robert S. Bryant, chief of detectives, and one to the Central Control Room—the central records bureau.

Inspector Bryant was understood to have called the discrepancy to Barrett's attention right after the hearing.

Fischbach, questioning Hartman, brought out a recently discovered slip-up in the police records system. In preparing a report for the committee, it was testified, Lieut. Hartman found there had been 400 arrests for carrying concealed weapons for a period when 240 complaints were made of this offense.

Hartman said he went to Inspector Walter Storm and reported the matter, and that Inspector Storm then called in the precinct captains to explain.

Inspector Storm testified he felt the captains had not fully understood the general order covering police reports. He said that almost without exception the basic records were in the precinct files, but had not been sent to headquarters on the official Form 251 offense reports. He said he spoke to all captains and devised a system to see that the reports came in thereafter—that they were to file an offense report for every Central Control Room number shown on the arrest book.

Inspector Floyd S. Truscott explained the central records system was placed in operation early in 1948. On another point, Truscott testified police recruitment standards have varied from time to time—top age used to be 35; it is now 31—where Truscott and others feel recruits should have a high school education "we're not requiring that today."

Forfeiture Not the Rule

In questioning Hartman, Fischbach brought out forfeiture of collateral, the rule for disposing of traffic violations, was not the rule for disposing of other major offenses—and that "sometimes" indecent exposure cases were disposed of by forfeiting collateral.

Maj. Barrett and Lt. Hartman told the subcommittee none of the courts here supplies police with the final disposition of cases. They said what records the police get are the notations by police officers on the statements of fact they take with them when presenting testimony in court.

Fischbach asked Hartman whether it was true no Federal law required any court here to notify the police of the disposition of cases. "That is correct," said Hartman.

"How does that affect police records?" asked Fischbach.

Hartman said in his opinion it meant the police records are "not effective", in giving the full picture of criminal cases.

"It affects the efficiency of our force a great deal," said Barrett. "The only way we can find the disposition of cases is to send a man over to court and search for them. It's quite a job."

Commissioner Sets Sights on 200-Men Addition, Costing $500,000 a Year

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

Commissioner John Russell Young is counting on the Davis crime subcommittee to help him get more men on the Metropolitan Police force.

A month before the public hearing phase of the current House crime investigation, Young told the House Subcommittee on District Appropriations in closed session:

"In my opening remarks, I mentioned that I was contemplating asking for 200 more men (on the police force)—nothing to with the Sesquicentennial, but for the increase in crime, and I wouldn't be surprised, I anticipate when the House crime investigation gets through, it is very possible they might themselves ask us to demand that we have more men."

"Tempted to Seek 200"

Young had authorized Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett to ask Congress for 41 additional men in the fiscal 1951 city budget, but told the appropriations subcommittee he was "tempted to ask for 200 more."

Commissioner Young's advance thinking on what recommendations the crime probe might make was disclosed last night with release of hearing testimony on the District budget, conducted early last month.

Legislatively speaking, the two House groups have no direct connection or overlapping membership.

Young testified an additional 200 men on the police force would cost more than half a million dollars.

Other testimony on the police department had these sidelights:

Policewomen

Women working as typists in precinct stations are cleaning up the language, Major Barrett told the Congressmen.

Barrett: "It changes the attitude of the policemen in a station house when there is a woman around in the office. I mean you used to go into a precinct and hear a lot of profanity. There is a different slant now."

Lowell Stockman (R., Oreg.): "It has a salutary influence, then?"

Barrett: "We asked for the policewomen, Mr. Congressman, because at that time we couldn't get men. Congress went out and left us without passing the $330 raise and we couldn't buy or steal men . . . We only got a few and they are doing very well. But we have about enough now (seven)."

Statistics

Barrett defended his method of compiling records of crimes committed and those "cleared" by his men. The FBI, he told Congress, knows that many other cities are not submitting accurate crime reports.

"My last conversation with Mr. (J. Edgar) Hoover was that some statistics were released by the FBI and they don't show a true picture for the crimes that are committed in other cities," Barrett testified. "And the committee of Congress

County Ambulances Spur Demand Here

The Joneses in this case are the privately supported ambulance services of Bethesda, Chevy Chase and Bladensburg.

Urging funds for a new ambulance for the local department, fire officials said the counties can pay what they want, and "it is very important to keep our equipment up on a par with others."

Lawyer Hurt In 2-Story Fall

An 80-year-old retired Government attorney was injured seriously yesterday morning when he fell from a second story window of his home.

He is William J. Conlyn, who lives at 936 35th st. nw. At Gallinger Hospital, he was said to have fractures of the left foot and right leg, and a possible fracture of the pelvis.

Educated in public schools of the District and Prince Georges County, he became a steam engineer for the District government for several years, then graduated in law at National University in 1915. In 1918, he went with the Department of the Interior as a law examiner, and continued there until his retirement in the early 1930's.

District Hopes For More Police

that is investigating crime now is pretty familiar with that. That is one of their questions," he added.

In his opening prepared statement, Barrett said increases in serious crimes are not so great as in previous years, but that there is still a "slight climb."

A huge jump in automobile registrations since 1945 has made it apparent, he said, that his force must "concentrate more and more on traffic enforcement."

Crime Breeders

Many juveniles start down the road of wrong-doing in park toilets, the subcommittee was told. Barrett spelled it out this way: "Parks such as Lafayette Park and Franklin Park are crime breeders. There is where many an act starts. There is many a young kid who starts out in crime around these toilets. We don't wait for authority. Our men, our plainclothesmen, and so forth, they take it upon themselves and we go into those toilets and we make many arrests. A lot of them have moved from the parks to the toilets of theaters, and so forth, which have had many, many arrests made in them."

Stop Lines

Representative Stockman lit into police "laxity" in insisting that drivers stop at crosswalk stop lines, not half way beyond them.

"It just burns me up," Stockman told Barrett, "to see 25 or 30 people walk clear around an auto when he is very likely sitting there with maybe nobody but himself," the Congressman said. Barrett reported that 690 arrests were made last year for this violation, and assured Stockman he would direct his force to see that stop lines get more respect in the future.

Sightseeing Business

Soliciting sightseeing drivers, with their uniforms and badges, are misleading the public and Congressmen in thinking they are policemen, Stockman complained.

Barrett agreed and added uniformed building guards to those giving the public a poor impression of policemen.

Collegeman Heads Credit Bureau Here

By S. Oliver Goodman

Samuel E. Collegeman was elected president of The Credit Bureau, Inc., of Washington at the annual meeting of directors and stockholders.

Collegeman

Collegeman, credit manager of S. Kann Sons Co., succeeds J. P. Stedehouder of Lansburgh & Bro. E. M. Arthur of Woodward & Lothrop was elected vice president and John K. Althaus was renamed secretary-treasurer.

The Credit Bureau, established here in 1921, has about 1500 members and keeps tab on the credit records of more than three million names, according to latest figures.

In addition to the above officers and past president Stedehouder, these directors will serve the bureau for the coming year: Harry N. Aiken of Grosner's; Leo Baum of the Goldenberg Co.; Benjamin Blanken of Chas. Schwartz & Son.; Abe Coonin of Wm. Hahn & Co.; Edward A. Henkel of Raleigh Haberdasher; Elsie M. Lee of Frank R. Jelleff, Inc.; Roscoe W. Reichard of The Hecht Co., and Ben Stein of Bensons Jewelry Co.

NIGHT BANKING: The Suburban National Bank will inaugurate Friday night banking hours, starting February 17, at its Silver Spring and Bethesda offices. Full services will be offered from 6:30 to 9 p. m. on Fridays. The institution's Wheaton branch has had Friday night hours for some time.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Henry C. Pierce has been promoted to Washington sales office manager of American Radiator & Standard Sanitary Corp. He succeeds Thomas Hannah, jr., who was recently transferred to Pittsburgh as manager of the company's central business contact department . . . James McHenry, of Glyndon, Md., on March 1, will become a general partner of Alex Brown & Sons, investment banking firm which has a branch here . . . John J. Kennedy, jr., formerly on the investment staff of J. P. Morgan & Co., Inc., has been appointed assistant treasurer of Continental Can Co.

H. C. Pierce

HONOR: Paul R. Ashbrook of Arlington, Va., has been named by the Farm Bureau insurance companies of Columbus, Ohio, as their outstanding agent during 1949. Ashbrook won the honor by topping the production records of the firms' 3000 agents. Ashbrook came to Washington in 1935 and served 2½ years as chief page in the House of Representatives and also as assistant secretary to William A. Ashbrook, former Ohio Congressman.

INVENTORIES: Business inventories showed a more than seasonal decline in December, the Commerce Department reported. Stocks totaled 53½ billion dollars at the start of this year after declining by 1.6 billion in December. This was about 150 million dollars more than the usual decline in December. On a seasonally adjusted basis, these was a drop of 500 million in retailers' stocks, partly offset by an increase of 300 million in manufacturers and a small increase in wholesalers' inventories.

BANK PROFITS: Federal Reserve member banks made a profit of 7.6 percent on their invested capital in 1949 compared with 7.2 percent in 1948. The Federal Reserve Board said also that net profits of the approximately 5000 banks in the system rose 66 million dollars to a 687-million-dollar total. These were profits after adjustments for losses, recoveries, profits on securities, valuation reserves and income taxes, the board said. Net profits were up in 1949 for all except banks in New York City, which reported a 28-million-dollar decrease that "reflected mainly larger net transfers to valuation reserves and increased provision for income taxes."

AUTO OUTPUT: Advices from Detroit indicate that auto output this week will total 123,768 vehicles, despite the idleness of nearly 30 percent of the industry's potential. Last week, production totaled 120,049. Besides the Chrysler plants, idle by a strike, Willys-Overland and Kaiser-Frazer also were out of production this week.

EARNINGS: Burlington Mills Corp. reported net income of $4,571,000 for the three months ended December 31, equal to $1.08 a share, compared with $6,350,179 or $1.53 a share in same 1948 period. Other earnings statements:

Video Shares Shoot Higher In Brisk Deals

New York, Feb. 9 (AP).—Radio-television stocks grabbed the spotlight in a generally higher market today.

It was a repeat performance for TV issues. The group has had to contend with a little profit taking in the past few sessions but earlier in the year staged a show that was nothing short of spectacular.

Gains running to a point or so were liberally scattered through the list and in a few cases larger advances were posted.

Trading speeded up when demand expanded. Sales of 1,810,000 shares were tops for the week and compared with 1,470,000 Wednesday.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks moved up .3 of one point to 73.7. The industrial and railroad groups were matched for first place while the utility section showed a minor loss.

Traders with a fancy for TV issues had another batch of highly favorable corporation reports to mull over. Magnavox Co. voted a dividend of 25 cents a share on common, first payment since January 1949. The resumption, the company indicated, was made possible by completion of a financing program, improved earnings and better control of inventories.

Philco Corp. announced that January production of television receivers was five times larger than a year earlier. Admiral Corp. disclosed that 1949 earnings amounted to more than double those for 1948.

Zenith shot ahead for a 3⅞-point gain at 43½. Up more than a point each were Emerson Radio at 28, Philco 37¾, and Magnavox 17⅞. Fractionally higher were Radio Corp. (the most active issue) at 14⅞, Admiral 24½, and Motorola 35.

Demand for aircraft issues appeared to be tied in with the Government's plane procurement program.

New York Cotton

New York, Feb. 9 (AP).—Cotton futures closed 60 cents a bale higher to 10 cents lower today. Heavy commission house profit taking caused sharp reaction in early dealings but the market took the selling well and subsequently moved up as much as $1.05 a bale from the lows of the day to establish new season's peaks. The best prices were pared partially on renewed profit taking and hedging toward the close.

Business Outlook

Lewis, at 70, Is Only a Shell Of Power He Could Have Been

By J. A. Livingston

WHAT will John L. Lewis do on Sunday, February 12, his seventieth birthday? Will he measure his years? Will he relish his victories and rue his defeats? And, having checked the score, will he celebrate? Or will he be too busy, wrestling with the legal details of his third Taft-Hartley bout?

In any stock-taking, John L. Lewis fits a Herculean mold. No labor leader, including the revered Samuel Gompers, has left as deep and permanent a mark on American unionism as he. Lewis took a bedraggled, disintegrated, undirected corps of union members during the depression and built it into a great political army. Yet his achievements have been others' fruits and not a source of happy remembrance.

Livingston

Lewis is the engineer of his own frustration. He built great edifices only to topple them down. He led labor's fight against the Taft-Hartley law. Yet he is Senator Taft's Exhibit No. 1 of the need for it. If Truman were to make the Taft-Hartley Act an issue in the 1950 election, the opposition would fling back: "But you, yourself, had to use it." Lewis has destroyed the very political issue he developed.

That's the taragic pattern of his whole career. During and after the war, Lewis raised the hourly wage of the coal miner to top rank among all production workers in American industry. But his on-and-off strike tactics made coal an undependable fuel. Users, including the railroads which haul coal, have converted to oil. Thus Lewis has helped dimish the demand on which his miners rely for a living.

LEWIS GOT the miners a welfare fund. But he set pensions so high and distributed benefits so lavishly that even Senator H. Styles Bridges, Lewis' own appointee, could not stomach the extravagances. The fund is now tied up by lawsuits and technicalities. Benefit payments to miners have been stopped. And many coal operators have adopted a UMW principle: No contract, no royalty. The fund hasn't been destroyed, but it's certainly in suspense.

During the 30s, Lewis broke with the American Federation of Labor and, aided by New Deal policies, formed the CIO. In a series of daring maneuvers, including sitdown strikes, he organized the steel and auto industries. When President Roosevelt declared a "plague on both your houses" during the violent "Little Steel" strike of 1937, Lewis turned away from Roosevelt. If you're not for Lewis, he's against you. He asked workers to support Wendell Willkie in 1940, and when Roosevelt was reelected for a third term, Lewis resigned from the presidency of the CIO. Philip Murray, whom Lewis refers to as "my former friend," harvested the fruits of Lewis' organizing genius. He became president of the CIO.

In developing the CIO, Lewis departed from AFL tradition. He took labor directly into national and local elections. He helped build the Democratic Party into a mojority party with labor for support. But by opposing Roosevelt and then by forcing Truman to use the Taft-Hartley Act three times against the miners, Lewis is outside the party, not in it.

LEWIS' EXECUTIVE board recently made him the supreme birthday gift by continuing him as president of the United Mine Workers in spite of the union's constitutional provision calling for compulsory retirement at 70. So he's still the "boss" of some 350,000 miners. But he might have been the leader of the CIO, with its five million or so members in expanding industries. He could have been a great influence in American politics, a maker of presidents and a frequenter of the White House. Above that, he might have been the unifying force in American labor, the leader around whom the CIO and AFL could have rallied.

At 70, he's isolated—accepted by the UMW only, enmeshed in Taft-Hartley and NLRB legal proceedings and troubled by the unyielding economic problems of a declining industry, coal. His tragedy is that he could not take no for an answer.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Feb. 9 (AP).—A combination of reduced freight car service and more dry weather in the Western plains caused a strong grain market today. New crop wheat deliveries made the largest gains, but other cereals also showed strength.

Despite the advance, volume failed to increase. A good part of the buying was attributed to local traders who were on the short side of the market and found the day's news events a little uncomfortable. Minor commercial buying entered wheat.

Wheat closed 1⅛ to 2¼ higher, corn was ⅞ to 1⅜ higher, oats were ⅜ to ¾ higher, rye was 1 to 1¼ higher, soybeans were ¾ to 1⅜ higher and lard was 15 to 20 cents a hundred pounds higher.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

THE PERILS of sportswriting are highlighted again by the episode in Detroit the other night when Mr. Lew Walter, covering the ice hockey beat for the Times, was knocked for a goal by the indignant coach of the Chicago Blackhawks, Mr. Charley Conacher.

POVICH

Ah, it's a rough business in which the sportswriter is continually tempting the anger of his subject which, worse luck, is usually a large and finely conditioned athlete. Mr. Conacher did not like what Mr. Walter had written about the Blackhawks and so he clouted him one, or maybe two.

He says he did not, as the reporter claims, wrestle the Times man to the floor and then grab him firmly by the throat. "I just pasted him," said Conacher, "put on my coat and left the room."

The evidence is that Mr. Walter was simply overmatched and not the victim a surprise attack. He is no green-pea sportswriter, in fact, he is a veteran of the business and should have been aware of the occupational hazards. Athletes have been belting sportswriters, with or without provocation, for, well, a long time.

IN ONE SENSE, our Detroit colleague was in luck. He wasn't hit by a spiked shoe grasped firmly in the hand of and swung by one of the greatest pitching arms in baseball—Dizzy Dean's. Those were the unequal conditions that confronted the late Jack Miley, baseball writer of the New York News, who met up with the Dean brothers on an unhappy spring training day in Tampa in the late thirties.

As Miley sauntered into the Tampa Terrace Hotel, Dean recognized him as the author of unkindly written comments. There were words with Dean and his brother Paul on one side, and Miley and Chicago Times Writer Irv Kupcinet. The two ballplayers set upon the two sportswriters and it was a nice sort of contest until Dizzy hauled off with the shoe.

The rest of the Cardinals, managed by Frankie Frisch, took no part in the rhubarb, least of all Pepper Martin. The Wild Horse of the Osage, as they called Martin, simply couldn't be disturbed at his happy task of counting the nickels of the jackpot he had hit in the one-armed bandit, as he sat cross-legged on the lobby floor.

THE BOXING and horse race writers have the safest beats. The nags don't read the sports pages, can't get offended at being called a quitter, fighting words when directed at the human animal. And the fight writers run little risk of being set upon by their subject matter, who, despite their calling, are the tractable sort and pride themselves on fighting only when they get paid for it.

Baseball players are probably the quickest to react to the sports pages. Mr. Bob Ruark, who wound up hitting most of the Pacific island operations, earned his first battle star in the Griffith Stadium dressing room where the Tigers were awaiting the start of a game. Sportswriter Ruark was recognized by Buck Newsom, then of the Tigers, as the guy who said in the papers that Newsom slugged an undersized waiter in the Shoreham Hotel.

Newsom advanced to Ruark, called him a name, and we were proud of what happened next. When Newsom invited Ruark to put up his dukes, our colleague didn't bother with any preliminary stance but belted Newsom on the chin. But he never could hit much, and neither could Newsom, and it was not much contest, but it was at least news of the man-bites-dog type: Sportswriter takes punch at ballplayer.

A COUPLE OF YEARS before, this department was the near-victim of enemy action. Joe Kuhel, then a first baseman with the Nats, heartily disliked an official scorer's decision charging him with an error, and came upon your agent after the game. One punch was thrown, his, and he whiffed, exactly as he did on the last pitch of the 1933 World Series with the Giants, before your agent retreated to a previously planned position.

Clark Griffith was pained to the point of ordering a $100 fine for Kuhel for the misdemeanor of trying to punch a sportswriter, although no evidence was ver exhibited that the fine was paid.

If the fine was never enforced, then Kuhel actually wound up $50 winner in the whole episode. After the story that he was to draw a fine was printed in the paper, Kuhel received a note from A. Fan at the Stadium the next day. It read: "Enclosed herewith is $50 with which to pay half your fine for taking a punch at a sportswriter. I would have sent along the other 50 if you hadn't missed."

Newcombe Signs One-Year Pact With Bums for $13,000

Brooklyn, Feb. 9 (AP).—Don Newcombe, the big rookie pitcher who was a key man in the Dodgers pennant drive, today signed a 1-year Brooklyn contract calling for an estimated $13,000.

Terms, as usual were not disclosed by either the club or Newcomb. Baseball writers, however, figured the National League's rookie of the year got about $13,000. It was believed Newcomb received the $5000 minimum salary when he moved up from Montreal last May and then received boosts during the campaign to about $7000 or $8000.

Don, a strapping 6-4, 220-pound right-hander, posted a 17-8 record and hurled 19 complete games. He hurled 5 shutouts, to tie three other pitchers for the lead in that department. He compiled a string of 32 straight scoreless innings and pitched in the All-Star game and World Series.

Holy Cross Wins 19th After Scare

Boston, Feb. 9 (AP).—The Holy Cross Crusaders registered their 19th consecutive basketball victory tonight after their stiffest fight of the season, downing stubborn, speedy Rhode Island State 74-69.

Larry Doby Signs With Tribe for $15,000

Cleveland, Feb. 9.—Larry Doby mailed his signed 1950 contract to the Cleveland Indians today. No salary figure was revealed, but Doby reportedly will receive $15,000, the same amount he made last year.

The 25-year-old long ball hitter batted .280 and smacked 24 home runs last year. In 1948, when the Indians won the pennant, Doby hit .301.

Hittle, Marrero Sign With Nats

Two rookie pitchers are the latest to accept salary terms with the Washington Club. Lloyd Hittle and Conrado Marrero sent their signed contracts to Griffith Stadium yesterday.

Marrero is viewed as the prize of the rookie pitching crop, coming to the Nats from Havana where he won 25 games last season in the Florida International League He is a stocky right hander. Hittle won five and lost seven after being bought from the Coast League in 1949 for $60,000.

Billy Conn, Star Back, Flunks Out at Georgetown

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Billy Conn, Georgetown U. star back, last night was dismissed from school because of "scholastic difficulty."

Conn, a junior, has been the chief Hoya pointmaker and ground-gainer for two years. The Newark, N. J., speedster is considered one of the op running backs in the East.

The Rev. Edward Jacklin, S.J., dean of Georgetown, issued a terse statement last night:

"Among students who were dismissed because of scholastic difficulty was Billy Conn." He wouldn't say how many students were affected or how many other athletes.

The action was not unexpected. On Monday, Father Jacklin admitted that Conn's collegiate career was "in danger."

Billy, one of the most popular boys at Georgetown, flunked his midterm English examination. He already had been a probationary student and had to attend summer school last year to make up a credit.

The scholastic board that passed on Conn's case evidently felt that it would be impossible for him to possess the credits necessary for his scheduled graduation, June, 1951.

Conn Unavailable

Conn wasn't available immediately for comment last night. Apparently his brilliant collegiate football career is over. He has only one more season of eligibility and, at most schools, would have to establish a year's residence before playing again.

Even if he wished to play professional football, he couldn't until after his class was graduated. That means he wouldn't be eligible until the 1951 football season.

As a sophomore at Georgetown, Conn broke in with a tremendous splash. Athletic Director Jack Hagerty, then coach, called Billy the "greatest runner Georgetown ever had."

Notable were his touchdown run of 75 yards against Boston College and a 102-yard dash against Fordham that was nullified by a penalty.

Wall Upsets Peggy Kirk

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 9 (AP). Mary Agnes Wall of Menominee, Mich., pulled a major upset in the fortieth annual Palm Beach women's golf championship today, defeating Defending Champion Peggy Kirk of Findlay, Ohio, 5 and 4.

Miss Wall set a new course record for women, blazing around the Palm Beach Golf Club course in 69, three under women's par and one under men's regulation figures.

Another upset came in the morning round when Caire Doran of Cleveland, Ohio, eliminated Polly Riley of Forth Worth, Tex., who won two Florida tournaments in as many weeks—the Tampa Women's Open and the Helen Lee Doherty. The score was 3 and 2.

Miss Wall's 69 broke the course record set by Miss Kirk and Marjorie Lindsay, Decatur, Ill., in qualifying play last year when each had 71.

Other quarter final results: Alice Bauer, Midland, Texas, defeated Carol Diringer, Tiffin, Ohio, 1-up; Marlene Bauer, also of Midland, eliminated Claire Doran, 4 and 3, and Miss Lindsay won from Mrs. James D. Platt, jr., of Miami, 5 and 4. In tomorrow's semifinal matches, Alice Bauer meets Miss Wall and Marlene plays Miss Lindsay.

Zimmerman Beats Madden For '126' Title

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Dave Zimmerman ended the knockout streak of Billy Madden and won the Golden Gloves' novice 126-pound championship by unanimous decision last night at Uline Arena.

A crowd of 5000 saw Madden's nose bloodied and his string of kayoes snapped at three.

Zimmerman, wearing Police Boys Club No. 2 colors, showed respect for Madden's punch the first round by hitting and holding. In the second round, he counter-punched cleverly with both hands.

The 17-year-old Merrick boy tried desperately to pull the match out of the fire in the third round by charging with his head down, but the cool-headed Zimmerman sidestepped, hooked and had Madden groggy at the bell.

Another string of three knockouts, that of John Kauzalarich, came to an end in the novice middleweight title bout. But Kauzalarich, a Fort Myer soldier, survived a staggering right by C.Y.O's Hunce Lanier in the third round to gain a split decision.

Kauzalarich, who put on his first boxing gloves just two months ago, cleverly carried both hands high and repeatedly rocked the stubborn Lanier with a potent straight left Lanier rallied in the third, and one of his rights, flush on the jaw, buckled the soldier.

Kauzalarich covered nicely, and was outslugging Lanier at the finish as the crowd stood and cheered.

Kauzalarich was chosen the outstanding novice boxer of the tournament and awarded the Fred A. Hartley Trophy by Jim Braddock, former world heavyweight champion.

Novice team title was won by the Quantico Marines when Charles Katzakian of the Marines outpointed Alex Maridakas of Catholic Youth Organization for the heavyweight crown.

'You're Older Than You Think'

Braddock Advises Joe Louis: Don't Attempt Ring Comeback

FORMER HEAVYWEIGHT champion James J. Braddock yesterday volunteered this bit of advice to Joe Louis:

"Stay outside the ring. Don't try to come back against Ezzard Charles. He's better than you think he is. He's faster than you. He'll knock your head off. You're older than you think."

Braddock, boxing's "Cinderella Man" of the 1930s, was in town yesterday to present a trophy at the Golden Gloves A. A. U. fights at Uline Arena.

A hefty 45 years old, his hair streaked with silver, and his nose bearing the marks of 15 years in the ring, Braddock said he has kept a close watch on the game.

He said, "Charles wouldn't have had a chance against the Louis of 10 years ago, but that doesn't mean Charles isn't a darned good fighter. Joe is fat and slow, he showed that in his two Walcott fights. Charles would murder the Louis of today."

Jim doesn't go along with the current forecasts that boxing will die out within a few years.

"Television is taking 35 per cent of the crowds away from ringside," he said("but the cure for that is a couple of real outstanding fighters."

He named Bernie Raynolds of Cleveland, Roland La Starza of New York, Lee Savold and Bruce Woodcock of England as "very good heavyweights."

BRADDOCK HAS no ambition to return to boxing as a manager. He's content to remain owner of a marine equipment company in his hometown of North Bergen, N. J.

Braddock was a dockworker at the same plant when he launched his dramatic comeback, which was climaxed by his upset of Max Baer for the title in 1935. Braddock was a 10-1 underdog. He lost the title to Louis by an eighth-round knockout in Chicago in 1937, and retired in '38.

He visited his former Congressman Fred A. Hartley, jr. (R., N. J.), yesterday and they got along all right despite the fact that Jim plans to enter the political fight for town commissioner as a Democrat in 1951.

He's grooming his two sons for athletic stardom in college, but not in boxing. They both have Jim's big build. Eighteen-year-old Jay stands 6 feet 3 inches tall and weights 180 pounds. Seton Hall is interested in him as a basketball player.

Howard, who is 19, stands 6 feet 5 inches tall and scales 230 pounds. Fordham's football scouts are on his trail. He's a tackle at St. Benedict's Prep in Newark.

But Jim says he's still the boss in his family. "I'm bigger than them at 235 pounds, and can lick 'em both." HERB HEFT.

Griffith Stadium Centerfield Will Be Shortened

Griffith Stadium will be more inviting to home run hitters beginning with the start of the 1950 season. The installation of pitchers' bullpens in deep center and left fields will shorten the home run distances by 14 feet.

Shallow, three-foot retaining walls will enclose the bullpens which will extend from the scoreboard in right center to dead center.

In left field the bullpen will be built in front of the bleacher walls. Balls that drop into the enclosures on the fly will be labeled homers. Hits that bounce into them will be ground-rule two-baggers.

Frank Spicer Stars In Eastern Branch Win

Frank Spicer's set shot with less than five seconds remaining gave Eastern Branch a 47-45 victory over Police Boys' Club No. 5 yesterday at Eastern. Spicer also led the winners with 18 points while No. 5's Bob Hackley was the game's high scorer with 19 points.

GW Will Play Game a Year In Alexandria

George Washington University yesterday signed a five-year contract to play a September football game in Alexandria's George Washington High School stadium.

It goes into effect next September 30 with the GW-Virginia Military Institute game. The Colonials will play there against Virginia, William and Mary, Washington and Lee and Virginia Tech in future years.

There's a good possibility that two other college games will be played at GW High this fall. Quantico's Marines have agreed to play the University of Tampa there November 8, but the contract hasn't been signed.

May Get Hoyas, Too

Hoya Athletic Director Jack Hagerty witnessed yesterday's contract signing by G.W. Sports Chief Max Farrington and Alexandria Board of Education Chairman Josiah Everley. It took place at Alexandria's George Mason Hotel.

Rental terms were not announced, but it was believed that G.W. will pay 10 percent of the net gate.

G.W. High Athletic Director Al Doran said that the stadium's capacity will be increased from 11,500 to 15,000 or 17,500 in time for the Colonial-VMI game. The lighting system also will be improved so that the colleges can play night football, if they want to.

The 1949 Quantico game attracted 11,500 fans, including President Truman. The C. of C. plans to name the Quantico-Tampa contest the "Presidential Bowl Game" in the hope that the Chief Executive will visit again.

Locals Give Up Leading Scorer for Don Otten

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

The Washington Caps have traded Jack Nichols, their leading scorer, to the Tri-City Blackhawks for Don Otten, 7-foot center, The Washington Post learned last night.

In addition to Otten, the Caps also received an undisclosed amount of money, believed to be about $6000.

The deal, which has been in the making since Christmas, will be announced at Uline Arena, home of the Caps, this morning.

Through Coach Red Auerbach, who piloted the Caps for three seasons before shifting to Tri-City this fall, the Blackhawks offered the Caps $15,000 for Nichols in December.

Otten Plays Here Saturday

The Nichols-Otten deal, the biggest in the short history of the National Basketball Association, was completed one day before the trading deadline.

Otten will make his first appearance as a Cap here Saturday night when Coach Bob Feerick's slumping locals meet the Anderson, Ind., Packers.

Nichols, who played only 5 minutes against Minneapolis last night and who has scored but 13 points in the last three Caps games, will be back at Uline Arena next Wednesday night when the Caps meet Auerbach's Blackhawks.

Nichols, 6-foot 7-inch star from the University of Washington, has averaged about 14 points per game for the Caps this season while Otten has a 12-point average for Tri-City.

Otten All-America

Otten, in his fourth year of professional basketball, was All-America at Bowling Green before joining up with the Blackhawks in 1947. He led the old National League in scoring last year with a 14-point average and was voted the league's most valuable player. He's 28, three years older than Nichols.

Nichols, who may forsake pro basketball to enter medical school next year, was a sensation with the Caps as a freshman last year. He joined the team midway the season and averaged 12 points per game in 34 games.

Caps Lose 5th In Row, 71-59

Special to The Post

Minneapolis, Feb. 9—The sagging Washington Caps lost their fifth NBA game in a row here tonight, finding George Mikan's Minneapolis Lakers too tough for the sixth time this season, 71-59.

Coach Bob Feerick resorted to an iron-man routine in tonight's game. He, Bones McKinney, Chuck Gilmur, Chick Halbert and Dick O'Keefe played without a sub for 42:44 or the 48-minute game.

Like everything else the Caps have tried against the Lakers, this, too, proved unsuccessful. Playing a deliberate, ball-holding game, the Caps were able to hold the Lakers at half, 27-25.

But Minneapolis broke up the game in the third period, outscoring Washington, 17-9. That did it. Chief victim of the Caps' style was big Mikan, but he managed to tie for high-scoring honors with his 15 points.

Alagia's 'Eye' Menaces Villanova

VILLANOVA, already receiving an icy stare from the NCAA, faces an added optical hazard in tomorrow night's collegiate basketball double-header at the Armory.

Georgetown's Frank Alagia promises to affix his ultraspecial baleful glare on any Villanova foul-shooter.

Alagia, who scored only one field goal, is being given most of the credit for the Hoyas' thrilling 75-73 victory over Rutgers Wednesday night.

Rutgers missed its last five free-throw attempts and Alagia is the guy who made 'em miss.

The stocky senior from Long Island edged his way as close to the enemy foul-shooter as possible. Then he gave the boys the eye. Conscious of it, the Rutgers boys got nervous enough to miss their shots.

"It really was nothing," modest Alagia said last night. "I do it all the time. After all, you can't talk or move around when you're on the line. I just stand with my hands on my hips and never take my eyes off the shooter. Some fellows are inclined to get a little nervous.

"I knew the Rutgers boys didn't like it, one complained to the referee and the crowd became conscious of it. That's when I tried a little harder.

"There's really nothing to it. I'm not psychic or anything. I think we won the game because they missed their fouls, but I feel they may have missed them even without my staring act."

Alagia hopes to have equal success wth his whammy against the tough Villanova team. "If there's any to be put on, I'll be in there trying," Frank said, "but they're going to be tough."

Frank hasn't confined his activities to staring. A real clutch ball player, his last minute baskets beat American U. and George Washington U.

From 200 pounds last season, Alagia's down to a svelt 180 and his drive and passing have helped Georgetown considerably in amassing a 10-5 record.

Villanova, led by Paul Arizin, has lost only three games in 18 starts. Last year's Eastern NCAA champion, Villanova may not be able to enter this season's tournament because of its difficulties with the Sanity Code's compliance committee.

Dear Folks:

No, I wasn't unwound and turned out. Instead, I ducked down to Florida for a few days. Didn't get as far as Hialeah, but did see some racing action at Sunshine Park. The mile track near Tampa isn't getting along any too well as far as betting is concerned. However, the crowds have been fair. The weather has been too good around the West Coast of the State to stimulate racing. Up to last week, the track had been fast for every race at the meeting. Daily temperatures in the 80s have meant beach weather and customers, who might turn up if kept off the shore by cold and rain, are conspicuous by their absence. Twenty-two more days until Charles Town; 43 until Laurel.—Bill.

Eagles, C. U., Duke, Terps Play Tonight

Athletic Director Staff Cassell declared yesterday that American University will never again play a basketball game against Siena College. "Their freezing tactics left me cold," he said.

Referring to A. U.'s Wednesday night game against Siena in Albany, N. Y., Cassell, who coaches the Eagles' team, added, "they deliberately ruined the game for the spectators by playing a game of possession in the second half. They refused to shoot in the face of our zone defense."

Deep Freeze Gets In

Siena won the game, 38-24. The score was, 22-20, Siena at halftime. After two minutes of the second half, with American trailing, 26-22, Siena adopted a "freezing" game, passing the ball, but not shooting.

Cassell said that the game got so dull during the middle of the "freeze" that Siena's three advance players, deep inside American U's defense, began "fraternizing" with the Eagles.

"Sherwood Webster, my right guard, got right into the spirit of things, by shaking hands with the Siena players," said Cassell. "It was ridiculous. It must have made quite an impression on 14 members of the Japanese Diet who were watching."

Ten minutes elapsed without a score before A. U. junked its zone defense and Siana resumed its attack.

In Albany, Siena's athletic director, the Rev. Maurus Fitzgerald, said he "wasn't disturbed" by the A.U. break.

He called American's zone defense "a thing of the past."

"It is uninteresting to the spectators and boring to the players and has no place in the present game," he added.

The two teams have met once in each of the last three years, Siena winning each time. Each team had made "feelers" for another game next year.

"But we won't play them," said Cassell. "Siena's Coach Dan Cunha apologized to me after the game, but I told him not to make apologies to me. 'Make them to the fans,' I told him."

Play Catholic Tonight

The Eagles, with a 13-7 record, meets Catholic University, 4—9, tonight in one of the area's two important games. A. U. is the scene of the Mason-Dixon Conference tilt.

At College Park, Maryland, 3—13, last in the Southern Conference, takes on Duke, 10—8, which leads the loop, in an 8:15 p. m. game.

Both games are return engagements. American beat C. U., 64—56, in an earlier meeting. Duke defeated Maryland, 54—48, in Durham.

Pimlico to Shift Steeplechase to Aqueduct Course

Nominators are allowed to name one horse for a series of three $5000-added races to be run at Belmont May 18, Aqueduct June 19, and Delaware Park June 27.

The event is for 4-year-olds and up, for non-winners at the time entries close on March 11.

Walcott's KO Foe Faces Ban

Philadelphia, Feb. 9 (AP).—Harold Johnson, 22-year-old Philadelphia light heavyweight who collapsed in the arena ring while fighting Jersey Joe Walcott last night, may be retired from boxing by the Pennsylvania State Athletic Commission.

Commissioner John (Ox) DaGrosa, after releasing the purses of the two fighters at a hearing today, said the commission's medical advisory board would investigate Johnson's condition.

"If the medical advisory board's investigation discloses the condition of Johnson's back is chronic and is likely to incapacitate him again, especially in the ring, the sensible thing to do for his own good and protection of the fans would be to retire him," DaGrosa said.

Johnson is in the Presbyterian hospital, where a dozen X-rays of his back have been taken.

His collapse in the third round without being hit was caused by what commission physicians, Drs. Joseph I. Levy and W. B. G. Terry, diagnosed as either a dislocated disk in the spine or a separation of the sacroiliac.

Deacons Aid Tourney Chance Beating VMI

Wake Forest, N. C., Feb. 9 (AP).—The Wake Forest Deacons improved their chances for a Southern Conference tournament berth by romping over Virginia Military Institute, 74-57, here tonight.

Led by Center Al McCotter, who scored 29 points, Coach Murray Gleason's Baptists registered their eighth conference victory. They have lost five times in loop play. Six conference games remain on the Wake Forest schedule.

2 Teams Seek Playoff Spots In High Loop

Two teams who still have a fighting chance of gaining the interhigh playoffs will battle it out in the feature second game of today's double-header at Uline Arena.

The first game, at 3:30, pits winless Bell against the Coolidge Colts in what should be a romp for the Colts, and then comes the important Roosevelt-Western clash.

Off the two teams' interhigh record it should be a toss-up, both having won 2 and lost 2. However, Roosevelt has a better record than the Red Raiders against non-league opposition.

Roosevelt's Ed Graham, now recovered from an ankle injury which hampered him earlier in the season, should give Western's big Hal Weintraub a real battle in the pivot post and the Rough Riders also have, in Billy Smith, a better-than average forward.

The Riders zone defense and clever ball-handling with Bob Cooper and little Al Touma, hitting from long range, should prove too tough for the Red Raiders to crack.

Western, on the other hand, has Stan Karas and Lou Snouffer, two of the better set shots in the league.

Palmer, Haas Tie With 68s, Snead Has 71 in Texas Open

San Antonio, Tex., Feb. 9 (AP).—Big Fred Haas, jr., of New Orleans and chubby Johnny Palmer of Badin, N. C., fought chilling north winds and unpredictable greens today for three-under-par 68s and a tie for the first round lead in the $10,000 Texas Open.

Haas' putter worked like a charm as the tall man from the South ripped what they said was a tough Fort Sam Houston course apart with a 34-34.

Palmer, playing the same course—a 6426-yard layout with a 35-36 par—wasn't too hot on the as deadly as they come. He did the first nine in 33 and came rolling home with a 35.

Seven players tied at 69. They were Ralph Blomquist, Glendale, Calif.; Al Brosch, Garden City, Long Island, N. Y.; Lew Worsham, Washington, D. C.; Jimmy Demaret, Ojai, Calif.; J. T. Hammett, Breckenridge, Tex., and Amateurs Dwight Weir, San Antonio, and Harold B. Ridgley of San Antonio.

Eleven deadlocked at 70. These included Cary Middlecoff of Ormond Beach, Fla., the National Open champion; Rod Munday, York Pa.; Toney Penna, Cincinnati; Bob Hamilton, Landover, Md.; Ted Gwin, Tulsa; George Fazio, Conshohocken, Pa.; Dick Metz, Virginia Beach, Va.; Iverson Martin, Graham, Tex.; Gene Dahlbender, Mamaroneck, N. Y., and Amateurs Jim Beardsley, Kingsville, Tex., and Bud McKinney, Dallas.

Dahlbender may get a 69. His ball hit in a hole made by a tractor lug and he played the original ball with a stroke penalty provisional ball under the "doubt as to rights rule." A ruling will be made tomorrow.

Sam Snead, the picture swinger from Greenbrier, W. Va., top favorite to win the tournament, had a respectable 71 and was tied with more than a dozen players at that figure.

Sam said his game was bad all around but his big trouble was hooking with his irons. He missed too many greens. He was putting mighty well.

Baltimore, Feb. 9 (AP).—Robert C. (Jake) Embry, president of the Baltimore Bullets of the National Basketball Association, disclosed that stockholders of the club had turned down an offer from several local businessmen to buy the franchise.

Embry and T. Garland Tinsley, jr., vice president of the club, met for three hours with the prospective buyers. After the session, Embry and Tinsley announced:

"The offer was considered and turned down. The Bullets are not on the block."

Raleigh, N. C., Feb. 9 (AP).—The first regular season professional basketball game south of Washington, D. C., will be played here March 1 between the Chicago Stags and the Washington Capitols.

This was announced today by Roy Clogston, athletic director of North Carolina State College.

Clogston said the game—to be a regulation league affair—will be Chicago's home contest. He said it has been transferred to Raleigh by agreement between officials at Chicago and Washington

Citizen Group Hits Bid for 'Blair Block'

Congress Heights Citizens Association last night criticized a proposal to purchase the block on Pennsylvania ave. nw. which the Blair and Blair-Lee houses are located. The city already has enough tax exempt property, members said.

Representative William M. Whittington (D., Miss.) introduced a bill on Wednesday for condemnation of the block bounded by Pennsylvania ave., H and 17th sts. and Jackson pl. nw. to assure the city of "desirable" use of the block.

Meeting at the Congress Heights Elementary School, 60 members adopted resolutions asking removal of streetcar tracks on Nichols ave. from Howard rd. to Esther pl. se.; establishment of a traffic signal at Nichols ave. and South Capitol st.; reduction in the real estate tax from $2.15 per $100 valuation to $2, and increasing the Federal contribution.

Leeman Urges Increase In Government Lump-Sum

Herbert P. Leeman, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, last night urged that the Federal Government contribute more money toward the support of District affairs.

He was the chief speaker at the weekly meeting of the Randle Highlands Citizens Association, at Randle Highlands School, 30th and R sts. se., David C. Williams presiding.

Group action included a request to the Fire Department for repainting of the area fire hydrants; recommendation that a bridge be planned north of the Sousa bridge; and backing of Walter M. Bird, president of Shepherd Park Citizens Association and the North Washington Council, for the Junior Chamber of Commerce's outstanding-civic-worker award.

Prince Georges Urged to Back School Plan

Despite appropriations of 15 million dollars in the last year Prince Georges County's school improvement program is still lagging by "at least 10 million dollars" the Chillum Civic Association was told last night.

Mrs. Simon Epstein, chairman of a special study group for the county's League of Women Voters, informed the group that a steadily increasing population, coupled with limited financial aid, have prevented the county from keeping pace with needs which were first outlined by her committee in a report a year ago. At that time, Mrs. Epstein pointed out, it was estimated at least 25 million dollars would be needed to cover minimum requirements.

To help offset the problem, Mrs. Epstein called on the association to support proposals for increasing the State 'incentive fund" for local school construction. Under the "incentive fund" program the State provides matching grants based on local population and property values.

On the business agenda the association adopted a resolution urging that a section of Chillum rd., north of Riggs rd., be incorporated in either the county or State road system. The street is now maintained by residents although it connects two principal State highways.

J. L. Shrader who introduced the resolution pointed out that the Prince Georges County Commissioners previously had refused to accept the road because it reached a dead end at one point and served only residents of that area. Shader said the dead end has been opened and contended the road now serves as a public thoroughfare.

Helsing Brothers, Inc. of Washington, was low bidder for paving of parking lots and driveways north of the amphitheater. The bid totaled $26,316.35.

Anti-Trust Probe Backed By Truman

Representative Celler (D., N. Y.) said after a White House call yesterday that President Truman told him to "go ahead full steam" with his investigation of concentrations of economic power.

"He said he would continue to encourage me in the inquiry and would get all the (Federal) departments behind it," Celler told reporters.

Celler heads a House Judiciary subcommittee which has been looking into the question of how anti-trust laws are operating and whether any changes are needed.

Celler has set a new series of hearings to begin March 15 when the committee will look into operations of United States Steel Corp.

Celler said that after United States Steel the group will go into:

1. The "Canadian newsprint monopoly."
2. The "duPont dynasty."
3. The soap industry, "particularly Lever Bros. and its British parent company, Unilever."
4. Pan American Airways.
5. The "distillers' control over" barrelmaking.
6. The "Shubert theater trust."

'Freedom Sing' Is Dedicated To Georgia

The United States Army Band and the National Sesquicentennial Commission honored the State of Georgia last night at the fourth in the Sesqui "Freedom Sings" concert series at the Interdepartmental Auditorium.

Guest soloist—a feature of the concerts—was the American-born pianist, Richard Gregor.

The band, conducted by Capt. Hugh Curry, played, and pleased with everything from a rhumba version of the jazzy "Lady in Red" to two dramatic sections from Moussorgsky's "Pictures at an Exhibition."

With Gregor and the band, the near-capacity audience heard the first movement of the Schumann Concerto in A Minor.

The pianist's offerings including a Rachmaninoff Prelude, a delicate Scarlatti "Aria" and encores by Prokofieff and Mendelssohn.

Movie Order's Effect Here Still Unknown

Officials of two motion picture companies here said yesterday they have no knowledge yet of the local effect of a New York Federal Court order divorcing theater chains from the distributing end of the movie business.

The order was entered Wednesday against Loew's Inc., (MGM); Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., Warner Brothers Pictures Distributing Corp.; and Twentieth Century Fox Films Corp. Only the first two operate theaters as well as distributing concerns here. The order gave a three-lear period for divorcing the two functions.

Miss Troxell Gives Varied Song Recital

By Paul Hume

Barbara Troxell is a satisfying song recitalist.

The New York soprano sang last night for the Georgetown Concert Group. She has been here in the past with the Cathedral Choral Society in Mozart's C Minor Mass, and Bach's St. Mathew Passion.

Her list of songs was drawn from familiar works of Mozart, Beethoven, Schubert and Strauss, and unfamiliar items by Bizet, Poulenc, John Edmunds and Paul Sargent.

There was nothing on the program which seemed too well known and some of the novelties came with the warmth of older friends. Miss Troxell is an exemplary Mozart singer. Her sense of style, phrasing and the quality of her voice all lend themselves with ease to this great music.

Beethoven's Ah Perfido! is a tiresome bore we hope to avoid in the future. It requires a large dramatic soprano to do it justice. Miss Troxell pushed her voice in its recitatives but sounded smooth and easy in the arioso sections.

In Schubert and Strauss the soprano was as at home and affecting as in Mozart. Her German diction is perfect. It was surprising to hear a Schubert song, "Erlafsee," we had not heard before. Miss Troxell followed the example of Jennie Tourel on Tuesday in bringing forward real gems of Schubert.

The winning color of Troxell's voice is natural in all nationalities of song. In a romantic group of Bizet and Poulenc she sounded lovely. Her French diction needs greater definition, particularly in consonant sounds. Poulnec's "C" is a moving moment. It possesses more emotional nuances than the artist gave it.

For her studies in American songs Barbara Troxell deserves another vote of praise. Winter Watts' "Stresa" takes just such a voice. It was perfect. So was the "Faucon" by Edmunds. Two nights after Tourel, Troxell sounded fine. That's a lot.

Dr. Siple Gets Medal

Dr. Paul A. Siple, the Boy Scout member of Admiral Richard E. Byrd's 1928-30 Antarctic expedition, yesterday received the Air Medal for taking part in a 21-hour navigational research flight over the North Pole in 1946.

The Air Force cited him for obtaining data which "will aid materially in future exploration of the Polar region." Siple is a civilian official in the Army's logistics division.

'Buscasting' Foes Organize, For Battle

Members of the Transit Riders Association last night elected officers for a one-year term and heard future plans outlined for its fight against "buscasting."

The term "buscasting" for radio broadcasting in streetcars and buses was suggested by Hector G. Spaulding, legal counsel to the association, at the meeting in the District Building. Nearly a third of the association's some 450 members were present.

Spaulding, professor emeritus of the George Washington University law school, reported on the filing of a suit at District Court against Capital Transit Co. asking for an "unconditional permanent injunction" to end transit radio broadcasting.

He said that attacks in the future may be made through the Public Utilities Commission, the Federal Trade Commission, and "also an attack directed at the corporate powers of Capital Transit under its franchise."

Spaulding said that Transit Radio, Inc., whose main office is in Cincinnati, "is really back of all cities where buscasting has been introduced."

Laughter swept the room when Spaulding said the protesting District group had been accused of being "communistic or Communistled."

Claude N. Palmer, who had been serving as provisional president until his "permanent" election last night, also denied that the association was the tool of any commercial or political interest.

Besides Palmer, who lives at 8010 Eastern dr., Silver Spring, the following were elected: Raymond A. Seelig, vice president; Otto Janssen, secretary-treasurer; Miss Anna C. Rider, corresponding secretary; H. J. Arnett, J. Franklin Carter and R. H. Reiter, executive committee members

By-laws were adopted at the meeting, and a motion for incorporation as a non-profit, educational body was referred to the executive committee

The association, in other actions, approved.

A resolution indorsing the bill of Representative Walter Norblad (R., Oreg.) prohibiting bus and streetcar companies from installing and maintaining equipment for commercially sponsored broadcasts, and providing a daily $1000 penalty for violation.

A resolution denouncing "the whole concept of capturing an audience and forcing it to listen," and petitioning the FTC to investigate, deny, or terminate, existing licenses permitting the practice.

Musmanno, a Navy captain during the Second World War, is the author of "Black Fury," which was made into a movie starring Paul Muni. He and criminal lawyer Clarence Darrow coauthored "Does Man Live Again?"

Deficiency Funds Bill Is Passed by House

The House yesterday passed by voice vote and sent to the Senate a deficiency appropriation which includes funds to keep the atomic program going at top speed.

Besides $78,885,000 in contract authority for the Atomic Energy Commission, the bill calls for $732,485,500 in cash, of which $720,000,000 is earmarked for veterans' benefits.

The total is 10 percent below Administration requests.

U. S. Workers Abuse Leave, Douglas Tells Ministers

Hope For Peaceful World

Although Mr. Truman's remarks were not made public, assistant press secretary Aben Ayers said the talk was a restatement of the President's often-expressed hope for a peaceful world.

Earlier, Senator Paul Douglas (D., Ill.) told the delegation at a breakfast at the Congressional Hotel that vacation leave privileges of Federal employes have been "abused."

Douglas said 20 working days each year, or a full month's vacation, should be substituted for the present 26 days of annual leave.

Over Five Weeks Vacation

The policy of 26 days' leave, he said, was launched when the Government was on a six-day week. It is now on a five-day week, so that Government employes can take five and one-fifth weeks of vacation each year.

Added to the vacation leave of 26 days, is sick leave of 15 days each year, Senator Douglas said. These leave provisions, plus regular holidays, he said, mean that Federal employes now work only 209 days each year.

On the Town

By Georganne Williamson

THE Old New Orleans Supper Club has announced the winner of its 17-week beauty contest. She's Shirley Talbot, beautiful dark-haired model and drama student who has already been crowned "America's Loveliest Model," "The Nation's Rose Queen" and "America's Dream Girl" the last one by Conover. At 21, Shirley paints, plays the piano, is proficient in ballet and acting. She's currently being tested by Hollywood studios. Washington is her native town and Coolidge High School her alma mater.

Shirley

Next week the club will send her to New Orleans and the Mardi Gras.

There the mayor and other officials will greet her, give her the key to the city, and provide her with a special float in the Mardi Gras parade.

VAUGHAN MONROE'S records of an Olmsted song, written and recorded for the Washington restaurant, are about ready for the taking by customers. Chef Roux is perhaps to be thanked for it.

When Monroe was appearing recently at the Capitol Theater, he made a habit of eating lunch at Olmsted's. He found cause to complain, though, about the menu. One of the specialties was "Guy Lombardo Steak Royal." Complain he did, and mentioned in the same breath that he was very fond of pork chops.

The result, the next day, was a new menu—with a specialty of Vaughn Monroe Syncopation Pork Chops, created by Chef Roux. The band leader was so pleased he promised Olmsted's a song, written especially for them. His pleasure was understandable—the pork chops, served in a ham and mushroom sauce with a wonderful stuffing, are really tasty.

The Stratford Hotel cocktail lounge has piano music by Nat Lipton now, after a steady diet of Muzak. Lipton has a distinctive style; he improvises almost entirely. The latest show tunes and songs are his themes. He has been heard before at the King Cole Room and the Colony and is currently doing a Sunday program over WGAY.

Atlanta, Feb. 9 (U.P.).—Ellis Arnall today withdrew as a possible candidate to oppose Gov. Herman Talmadge for the Georgia governorship this summer.

The former Governor said he will not be a candidate for Governor, nor, as the political situation now stands, will I actively engage in the gubernatorial campaign."

He said "political and personal reasons account for my decision."

Hudson to Show New Commodores

Detroit, Feb. 9 (AP).—Hudson Motor Car Co. tomorrow will introduce its new super and custom Commodore models with numerous refinements and lower price tags.

The price cuts, previously announced, range from $87.50 to $166.50. No change has been made in the price of Hudson's recently introduced Pacemaker model in the lower priced bracket.

Among the advances in styling and engineering of the new 1950 models are new curved full-vision rear windows and windshields. Front and rear fenders have been absorbed into the body and are continuous from headlights to tail lamps. A new grille has diagonal twin-struts which form a triangle with the illuminated Hudson emblem at the top.

Bolton Defense Fails to Discredit Story Of $15,000 Offer to 'Rub Out' Reuther

He testified that Bolton, also a convict, offered Kaliszewski and him $15,000 when he took them for a ride in his car three days before the shooting. He also claimed that Bolton went to Kaliszewski's apartment when he was there the day before the union leader was assaulted and carried out two shotguns, threatening to "go hunting for a red or a redhead or something like that."

Defense Attorney Joseph Louisell drew several conflicting answers from Pantella, getting him admittedly "confused." Then he walked up near the witness stand, lowered his voice and asked:

"Now tell me Johnny, there never was such a ride, was there?"

"Oh, yes, there was," Pantella replied.

"Yes, there was, very much so," Pantella insisted. "You better talk to Carl Bolton. He might tell you more about it."

"Don't worry, I have talked to him," Louisell came back.

Pantella denied earlier he was "lying" about the Reuther case, although he admitted he had lied in the past.

'Berlin Command'

Reds' View: Best Time to Kick a Lady When She's Down

By Brig. Gen. Frank Howley

This is the sixth of 12 articles taken from the new book, "Berlin Command," which will be run daily in The Washington Post. The author, Brig. Gen. Frank Howley, battled the Russians for four years, from 1945 to 1949, as deputy commander and then commander of American forces in Berlin.

IF THEY accomplished nothing else, the food discussions with the Russians in Berlin shed a revealing light on their techniques.

In talking over the problem with Colonel Dalada—who had become Russian deputy after several changes in that post—I said, apropos of the hungry Berliners, "Well, anyway, you can't kick a lady when she's down."

Dalada smiled indulgently. "Why, my dear Colonel Howley," he replied, "that is the best time to kick her."

"You mean food is political?" I snapped.

"Of course," he said, smiling.

His remark exemplified one of the many inconsistencies of the Russian attitude. Although they never hid their hatred of the German people, they were always pushing us to hurry food into the city and urging us, again and again, to get even more food.

The Russians were the first to set up soup kitchens in the streets of Berlin, but there was nothing humanitarian about the enterprise. Food was a channel for Communist propaganda.

I had been operating on a different basis. Where the Russians parceled out extra bits of food in return for services rendered and for general political loyalty, I distributed food to the Germans to keep them from starving on our hands.

A Blunt Viewpoint

I WAS NOT, however, in favor of giving them American sirloin steaks every night. Perhaps I had been unnecessarily blunt in saying so, but I had come to Berlin with the idea that the Germans were our enemies.

Even though it was becoming more evident every day that it was the Russians who really were our enemies, I still was not prepared to embrace the Germans as allies.

Unfortunately, I reiterated that proposition publicly. I already had received a hangman's noose, dipped in red paint, the gift of a German crank.

Now, when I repeated that I was not giving the Germans food because I loved them, someone in the States wrote his Senator. I was depicted as the "Beast of Berlin."

The Senator, of course, got in touch with the War Department, and the War Department got in touch with me."

I received a gentle slap on the wrist and the intimation that I had not been especially diplomatic. A report was requested and I confirmed everything the Senator had said, reiterating once more, in a general way, my attitude toward the Germans.

I then sat down and waited for the rebuke supreme. It never came. Apparently the incident was closed.

Developing the principle that all roads lead to Rome, Bismarck made Berlin the center of the German wheel. All rail and road traffic leads to the capital, and hundreds of thousands of refugees flocked in, bringing with them 25 percent of the city's diseases, including typhus.

Housing Hopeless

A DANGEROUS situation developed. Food was scarce, housing was hopeless. Something drastic had to be done.

At one time we considered throwing a barricade around the city, but that would only have caused camps to spring up on our doorstep. Many of the refugees claimed to be Berliners.

German soldiers began to appear among the civilian refugees. They had been captured by the Russians and turned loose with the order: "Go on, get going!"

The soldiers were a pathetic sight. They came into the city with tin cups and buckets tied around their necks, wearing dirty, tattered uniforms, the wounded with rude wooden splints and filthy bandages wrapped around their legs.

Hollow-eyed, bones pushing through the skin, no soldiers in history ever looked more defeated and dejected than those prisoners of war released by the Russians.

But they received less sympathy from their own people than they did from our soldiers. The Prussian loves a winner; he has no use for a loser.

Different Black Market

Perhaps the term "black market" is a misnomer, because conditions in Berlin differed from those of any other city in Europe. None of the incentives that created black markets elsewhere were present. In Rome the medium was food. In Paris, gasoline.

In Berlin, however, there was no food for surreptious trading, except some PX goods, and we soon stopped that. No food came in from the outside, because the Red Army scraped the district and also because there was no transportation—unless you were a Red Army officer.

The once swank Femina Club served big, luscious steaks, brought in by businesslike Russian officers. But Berlin saw none of the black-market activity in food carried on, say, by the German Army of Occupation in France.

There was no inviting market for gasoline, either, because there were no civilian cars.

One drunken GI did sell a jeep for $10,000, but not even an Army jeep can run on empty tanks.

Fixed Rendezvous

WHAT DID develop was a number of barter points for the sale, or exchange, of clothing, jewelry, and personal effects. At first, the Germans left notes tacked on trees or stuck on walls, making their offers and fixing the rendezvous.

Berliners exchanged ski shoes for overcoats, chairs for pants, luxury items for clothes and, if possible, for food, which was practically negligible. Barter was supposed to be for civilians only and instead of straight swapping of goods, it was natural that money transactions should develop.

To regularize this business under city control, we authorized the establishment of at least one barter market in each sector, with an official appraiser. Cash was to be used only as an emergency form of adjustment.

We immediately faced the charge that we were legalizing the black market.

We Americans were not too happy over the barter markets, although we agreed to give them a trial, hoping to control some of the wilder bartering and fraudulent practices. Paradoxically, the Russians were in favor of the markets and did not find them inconsistent with their own customs.

Favored Free Trade

FOR THE first time in our dealings with them, we heard the Russians renouncing the basis of the Communist economic system and favoring free trade.

Our troublesome issue involved German uniforms. Thousands of German soldiers had no other clothing, but we ruled that it was inconsistent with national policies to permit former members of the Wehrmacht to wear uniforms symbolic of Nazi Germany.

But what else could they wear? First to reach Berlin, the Russians had restricted them to nothing later than the 1932-type uniform and afterward designed a brown uniform, with a British-style beret.

Everyone in Berlin but the Russians sympathized with the Germans in this predicament. The men must have something to wear in winter and there was nothing in sight to replace the outlawed uniforms.

We won our point when the meeting decided to give returning soldiers two weeks either to get their uniforms dyed, or thoroughly to demilitarize them.

The comment of the Russian delegate at one point in the discussion was almost on a par with Marie Antoinette's famous advice about feeding the starving French.

"No clothes?" he shrugged. "Well, let them wear underclothes."

No One But You

No matter where you go, my love . . . The sky will be the same . . . And I shall never have to say . . . That I forgot your name . . . For I will hold you in my heart . . . With every golden dawn . . . Beyond the sun and shadows and . . . Until the stars are gone . . . And if the clouds are heavy and . . . The rain is coming down . . . Or if a coverlet of snow . . . Is falling on the town . . . . . . My fire of desire, dear . . . Will always grow and grow . . . Against whatever obstacles . . . And all the winds that blow . . . I shall remember you and I . . . Will be forever true . . . Because my heart could not belong . . . To anyone but you.

Good Buys For The Week

Chickens Now Hatch Budget Menus

By Lucia Brown

EGGS get the top award as penny-savers again this weekend. They're running 12 cents a dozen less at wholesale than this time last year.

Chickens are slightly higher than last week, but about 10 cents a pound less than last February. Some of the stores are running nice weekend specials on fresh and smoked hams and steaks.

Other good buys are grapefruit, now at its choicest, cauliflower, beets, lettuce, escarole, Romaine, chicory, green beans, potatoes, and Yellow Globe onions.

Here's a suggested luncheon or supper menu making use of the best buys of the week:

Zesty Egg Casserole
Buttered Beets Baked Pototoes
Tossed Green Salad Popovers
Grapefruit Cream Freeze

ZESTY EGG CASSEROLE

1/3 cup salad dressing or mayonnaise
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon paprika
½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
½ cup milk
1 cup grated sharp cheese
1 teaspoon grated onion
8 eggs

Combine salad dressing and seasoning. Gradually add milk, stirring after each addition until smooth. Add cheese and cook over low heat until cheese is melted, about 5 minutes. Pour half the sauce into greased flat casserole, or into four individual baking dishes. Break eggs carefully into sauce. Garnish around eggs with the beans. Top with remaining sauce. Place in pan of hot water. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees) until eggs are desired consistency, 12 to 15 minutes. This recipe makes four servings.

GRAPEFRUIT CREAM FREEZE

2 egg yolks
Pinch of salt
6 tablespoons sugar
¾ cup crumbled macaroons
1 cup heavy cream, whipped
1 tablespoon grated grapefruit rind
1 cup grapefruit juice
1 tablespoon lemon juice

Scald light cream in top of double boiler. Beat together egg yolks, salt and sugar. Add scalded cream slowly, mixing well. Cook over hot water, stirring frequently, until thickened or until mixture coats a metal spoon. Cool. Fold in macaroons and whipped cream. Blend in the rind, grapefruit and lemon juices.

Pour into freezing tray. Freeze 1 hour until mush-like consistency. Turn into chilled bowl and beat until smooth but not melted. Return to freezing tray and freeze until firm.

Try making this unusual Grapefruit Cream Freeze with some of the fine fruit now on the market

POPOVERS—tiny mountains of golden-glazed crust, hollow inside, moist and buttery—are a wonderful way to use plentiful eggs. If you have trouble getting them to "stay popped," check on your baking time. Be sure to leave them in for the full period at the temperature given in your recipe

Ask Anne

ANNE

Damper Than Washington? Impossible! Yet That's What a Traveler Tells Anne About the Climate in Trieste

DEAR ANNE:

In answer to C.B.B.'s question about Trieste:—

The climate there is quite like that of Washington, except that it's right on the sea, and so is even damper. On the other hand, sailing and swimming make the summer more endurable. There are also good opportunities for skiing in the nearby Dolomites. There isn't much snow in winter in Trieste but an icy wind called the Bara blows down from the mountains and makes very warm clothing a necessity.

As to supplies, there are no particular shortages. You may not find standard American brands, but there are the Italian equivalents. Drugs are obtainable. And if you are in any way connected with the American Government or military forces, you will be able to use the PX's. Any electric appliance must be the kind that works on any current.

Because of the Anglo-American troops, housing is very, very tight, but anything you get is apt to be furnished. Again, if you are in the military service house and furniture will be requisitioned for you. I would take such personal effects as linen, silver, pictures, etc.

J. J.

MANY THANKS TO J. J. and other readers, including a former military governor of Trieste, who offered C.B.B. first-hand information. All letters are being forwarded to her.

DEAR ANNE:

My 2-year-old son is very fond of scribbling with crayon on everything (except tablet paper). So will you please tell me how to remove crayon marks from wallpaper? M. B. L.

DEAR M. B. L.:

Crayon marks are among the toughest smears that mothers are called on to remove from the long-suffering walls. You've got two things to contend with here—color and grease.

Try sponging with dry cleaning fluid first. If spot still looks greasy, make up a paste of the cleaning fluid and cornstarch on Fuller's earth and apply to the spot. Brush off after it dries.

Any color still there? If so, your best bet is a bleach—half-and-half chlorine bleach and water. Apply to spots with a water color brush, but don't let bleach run down the wall. Catch it with a clean blotter so it won't leave streaks.

After you've gotten the crayon mark bleached out, you may find that the wallpaper color is gone from that spot too. Don't worry. Just get your youngster's water color set and paint it back in, being careful in mixing and matching the shades.

* * *

DEAR ANNE:

Having been a home ec major in college, I enjoy experimenting with recipes. Perhaps your reader who asked about making chili con carne in her pressure cooker would be interested in this quick-fix method I developed from the recipe of an Atlanta restaurant. (Using canned kidney beans saves a great deal of time.)

QUICK CHILI

¾ lb. ground beef
1 tablespoon shortening
1 large onion
No. 2 can tomatoes
No. 2 can kidney beans
¾ to 1 tablespoons chili powder
1 teaspoon salt.

Brown meat and onions in shortening in skillet. Use more shortening if meat is very lean. Place all ingredients in pressure cooker and cook for 15 minutes at 15 pounds pressure. This recipe makes four servings.

MRS. CLARENCE W. KITCHENS,
Cameron Valley, Alexandria, Va.

BIGGEST dishwasher to date! That's what one of the appliance companies, Westinghouse, has just announced.

It's such a big baby that it will wash and dry 64 pieces of dinnerware plus the silverware (dinner service for eight) all at one time. Sliding in and out like a drawer, it lets you load the dishwasher from the top, then push it back in place for washing purposes. In this way, you have an unbroken surface above for counter work.

Guide to Glamour

Try Thirty Short Cuts to Beauty

By Terry Hunt

Here is advice from an expert—a man whose business is glamour and character building.

Terry Hunt is a conditioner of Hollywood stars. Among his clients are Rita Hayworth, Joan Crawford, Shirley Temple. Betty Grable says: "Terry Hunt has helped more stars keep their names on theatre marquees than most directors."

This is the last of a six-article series, a condensation of the recent book, "Guide to Glamour," Prentice-Hall, Inc.

CHAPTER SIX—THIRTY SHORT CUTS TO BEAUTY

THESE suggestions are short cuts to beauty, little ways of becoming better groomed, more tidy and clean-cut of appearance. Study these and you will have a better understanding of what it takes to improve your looks, make yourself more glamorous.

1. Winter does not excuse you for having a "fuzz" on your legs. Sheer hose do not hide it. Use a depilatory.

2. Polish your elbows once a week with a mixture made of oatmeal and cleansing cream, making certain that the resultant product is still rough enough to create friction.

3. Hair on your arms is ugly. Stores sell a bleaching kit that will make this almost invisible.

4. If you shave your arms or legs, sprinkle baby powder on first. This prevents friction chapping.

5. Does cold weather cause your legs to become rough and mottled? A solution of castor oil in alcohol will help.

6. How you exercise is as important as if you exercise. Don't expect results unless you do your workout with eagerness and enthusiasm.

7. Plenty of milk and green, leafy vegetables will help keep your nails in condition.

8. Use the right make-up. If you can't select it yourself, trust the salespeople in the better stores.

9. Dermatologists have proved that the skin is fed and made lovely by the blood stream, so watch what you eat.

10. Highly advertised skin lubricants will not cause new tissue to grow. All they can do—and this is of value—is to keep your existing tissue in good condition.

11. Before starting any dieting or exercising program, be sure to check with your family doctor.

ANN BLYTH
". . . attract people to you"

12. A soft complexion brush is excellent for stirring up the circulation of your skin.

13. If you're heavy, stick largely to liquid breakfasts, for food has been found to be more fattening before noon.

14. A glass of hot water in the morning will pay you dividends.

15. If your energy runs low in midday, try some honey on a cracker. This is a potent producer of warmth and vitality.

16. Water is good for your system—drink at least 1 quart daily.

17. Wear high heels for dress only, as they tend to cause lower back curvatures.

18. Vitamin D, which is sunshine, makes for strength of bone, beautiful teeth, wholesome blood, and a lovely skin. Get plenty of it.

19. If you do a lot of reading, relieve the strain on your eyes by rolling them around in your head, and then fixing them on varied objects.

20. Lie on your back and let your head hang from the edge of the bed a few moments each day. This has three purposes: (1) It tightens muscles under the chin. (2) It brings a sudden rush of blood to the head and face which helps tone the tissues of the face. (3) It gives nourishment and stimulation to the hair follicles.

21. Brush your hair every day and massage the scalp at frequent intervals. A healthy head of hair, well-groomed, is indubitably a woman's "crowning glory."

22. In brushing the hair, part it in the middle of the back of your head, and brush away from the part, first up, then down. Repeat this all over the head—it is splendid for stimulating circulation of blood through the scalp.

23. Castor oil is a wonderful aid to the growth of your hair.

24. Sleep "knits the raveled sleeve of care." If you're tired, despondent, nervous, try getting an extra hour's sleep at night. It will do wonders.

25. See a chiropodist for all serious foot ailments, and don't cut corns or bunions yourself with a razor—the resultant infection might be extremely serious.

26. Walk at least an hour every day. It improves your circulation, tones up your system, and gives you a better appetite at meal times.

27. Regulate your diet, substituting laxative fruits for rough cathartics, for these have only a temporary value and injure the membraneous lining of the intestines.

28. Avoid overindulgence in strong liquor. It is bad for your system and bad for beauty.

29. If you work indoors, in an office or factory, do some simple exercise before an open window before retiring for the night. Inhale through the nose, exhale through the mouth.

30. Learn to be generous, openminded, kindly, decent in your attitude toward others. These emotions will eventually be reflected in your face and will attract people to you.

Trumans Fete Barkleys Again

By Marie McNair and Elizabeth Maguire

PRESIDENT and Mrs. Truman entertained last night at the second of two dinners given in honor of Vice President and Mrs. Barkley at Blair House. Because the dining room at the temporary White House seats only 16, it was necessary to divide the guest list into two groups.

Asked to meet the Vice President and his bride were the Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn, Secretary of State and Mrs. Dean Acheson, Senator and Mrs. Brien McMahon, the Secretary of the Air Force and Mrs. W. Stuart Symington, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ford 2d of Detroit, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas MacArthur 2d, son-in-law and daughter of the Vice President, and Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer.

About People Hereabouts

Mary Gets the Mink, Jappy the Income Tax

By Ellen Buell Parry

W. JASPER (JAPPY) DuBOSE says the money his wife, Mary, made out of "Your Handbag Directory" cost him money. She earned a tidy sum as its coeditor. But, says Jappy, as soon as Mary received her check, she bought a mink jacket and two Dior dresses, leaving him to pay the income tax on her earnings.

Mrs. Robert G. McKay was her colleague in producing the miniature directory here. They were chosen by Mrs. F. O. W. McPherson of Chicago who sponsored similar publications in 22 cities.

The directory which is 3 inches by 5 inches (small enough to fit in any handbag) suggests local firms, shops and services to take care of the plain or fancy needs of any member of the household, including the dog, the canary and the pet fish.

If you want a singing accordionist for your party, turn to page so-and-so. Another item says: "If your children have outgrown their clothes and you are tired of yours, call 'Outgrown'" (This refers to the shop operated by the Junior League of Washington at 21st and Massachusetts ave.)

It suggests a place to purchase "Scented Gifts," supplies the name of an artist who will do "charming watercolors of your garden and interiors," tells you where to go for "confections sans pareil" and whom to call for "chauffeur-driven late models for all occasions."

About the only person it doesn't satisfy is Jappy; it doesn't tell him how to pay the income tax on Mary's earnings.

MRS. F. PEAVEY (Brad) HEFFELFINGER of Wayzata, Minn., came to Washington this week—a little more than a year behind schedule. Her original plans called for a descent on the Capital on January 20, 1949. She had bought her dress, made her hotel reservation and had even asked her housekeeper to be her guest here at what she (and most people except President Truman) thought would be an inaugural celebration for Thomas E. Dewey.

MRS. HEFFELFINGER

Her husband, Peavey, a great teaser, loves to tell about her elaborate plans for that trip—and their sudden cancelation "due to unforeseen circumstances."

She is the new National Committeewoman from Minnesota and has been here to meet with the Republican Policy Committee.

The grapevine has it that Brad is already busy on a new set of elaborate plans—having to do with an inaugural ceremony here on January 20, 1953.

Oldest daughter, Mary Jane (Jinx) now Mrs. Richard Clark, is here with her husband, United Press diplomatic correspondent from London. Before marriage she was an actress and ballet dancer.

Rosalie (Rhody) was squired at the Uline Arena Lincoln Day celebration by Philip Willkie, son of the late Republican candidate. She is being graduated from Smith College in June (her mother attended Smith, too); last year was one of Smith's exchange students in Switzerland. Incidentally, Rhody is president of the Republican Club at Smith.

Milly, youngest daughter, finishes at Madeira School this spring. All four daughters (Mrs. John Ballentine of Princeton is the other one) went to Madeira. Pete, the Heffelfinger's only son, was graduated from Yale last June, now lives in Canada.

For 10 years Mrs. Heffelfinger has been working actively with Republican groups in Minnesota. She went to the National conventions in 1940-44-48.

In addition to political activities, she was, during the war, chairman of women's division of the Office of Civilian Defense for Minnesota. She is now national vice-chairman of the American Overseas Aid for the United Nations Appeal for Children. In 1949 she went to Europe and made a special study of the displaced persons problem, brought back information to Minnesota Gov. Luther Youngdahl, which set the pattern for the resettlement program in Minnesota.

TWO newspaper men, breakfasting at the National Press Club, last Tuesday were overheard saying:

Your Figure, Madame

Oo-la-la Girl Sponsors Return of Ample Curves

By Ida Jean Kain

MEET Denise Darcel, the French importation, whose curves have caused quite a stir in Hollywood and Manhattan . . . oo-la-la. Her aim, she announced blithely, is to bring back the famous Lillian Russell figure—ample curves and a slender waist. Well, she has the specifications: bust 39, waist a slim 24, and hips a full 38. She is 5 feet 4 inches and weighs 130 pounds.

Denise is curved, not buxom, and she has vitality in abundance. Those curves are the reward of exercise, which she goes in for with contagious enthusiasm. Twice a day she romps through her routine doing each exercise 30 times, no less. Here's her program, which American girls might like to adopt—it builds curves and shapes the waist.

A flick of the wrist for those Lillian Russell curves . . . Stand with arms extended straight out in front of chest at shoulder level. The exercise is a startlingly quick criss-cross movement, rapidly crossing hands at wrists, over and under, six, eight or ten counts—carry on by flinging both arms wide out to the sides, return and criss-cross again, again . . . and fling! Keep it snappy. This lifter-upper guarantees curves.

Shaping Waistline

FOLLOW by clasping hands at wrists with arms bent in front of chest at shoulder level. Holding hands tight, "jerk" with a tightening motion in the direction of each elbow. This also builds curves.

Now to shape the waist. Stand tall, feet apart, arms stretched overhead, pulled s-l-i-m through the midsection. Twist gently at the waist to the right (hips held still), and swoop down to touch fingers of both hands to floor at side of right foot. Back to position, stretch tall through middle, twist smoothly to the left and bend to touch fingers to left side. This stretch-twist-bend pulls out all the bulges. Warning: this thorough-going erercise is only for those with normally strong backs.

Add to this, regular sit-ups—coming up from flat on the back and going over to touch fingers to toes, plus swimming, and there you have the pattern that changes bulges to curves.

She Loves to Eat

THIS French star takes a dim view of her studio's orders to streamline. But, true to form, Hollywood has her on an American diet to lose 10 pounds. At the time of this interview she had lost three and gained one. They'll never succeed in getting Denise ultra-streamlined. She's against it. Besides, she loves to eat. When I attempted to get her to tell about the diet, all she could talk about was food. . . . so I inquired what she most minded giving up, to which she promptly replied, "Everything! Ice cream, bread, potatoes . . . everything."

Between remarks about food, she asked me why everybody in America is on a diet, including the thin ones. "Why do they want to be less?" she queried. She has something there. More power to her . . . if anyone can start a vogue for movie actresses carrying a bit more weight, it's this French gal with her joie de vivre.

Helpful Hints

Old stockings plaited together to form a flat cord will keep the wind from coming in under that ill-fitting door.

Add a tablespoon of paraffin to the water when washing lineoleum. It helps remove stains and acts as a preservative to the linoleum.

If the new shoes seem to rub a little at the heel, rub a little soap or paraffin on your stocking before they have time to blister.

Mary Haworth's Mail

about him and I also love him very much. My life wouldn't be complete without him; and furthermore, I would have no place to go if I did leave him. My mother died years ago and my father married again, after waiting until we children were grown. My brother and sister also are married, and busy with their own families.

Recently Wayne and I had a new home built and it is a very pretty place. At first I thought the house was just what he needed, but apparently it isn't the answer either. I was married very young (at 17) and yet it seems that in all ways I am more settled than Wayne. I am 22 and he is 28 this year.

Although he doesn't stay home much at nights, he is a good provider, and he is nice to us and doesn't fuss. But it just seems that he is forever doing something that makes me fuss with him. Please advise me what to do. I feel as if the world is against me.

F. E.

Man Is Taking a Wrong Turn

DEAR F. E.: This is indeed a ticklish problem, inasmuch as Wayne manifests many endearing qualities as husband and father, and yet on the other hand is drifting into a habit of philandering, which is one of the most serious trials that a marriage can undergo, and one which gradually drains all sweetness from the conjugal relationship as a rule, if the philandering becomes a perennial practise.

Much mail I've received on this subject over the years indicates that many wives, on finding themselves facing a problem of "other women," worry through to a decision to put up with the situation, overtly at least. By that I mean, they continue living with the errant spouse, figuratively closing their eyes to his misconduct, for various shadings of dependency-reasons, and because they don't want him to guess how "helpless" they feel or how calculating their shut-eye policy is.

This might be a constructive solution of the situation, bringing the wandering husband and the diplomatic wife to safe harbor and excellent terms at long last, provided that the wife in making that adaptation, were able to keep sensibly in mind throughout, and vividly appreciate, the good qualities in her husband that caused her to overlook the flaw. And provided also that she didn't let hidden resentment, self pity, and other such negative emotions become the principal ingredients of her unconscious feelings in (or towards) her relationship with him.

Be Wholehearted About Staying On

HOWEVER, it seems that few wives think in those terms, or look ahead to conserve their emotional health, or try to rise to an active protective practice of Christian charity in their emotions, when making practical accommodation to an unfaithful husband.

Consequently, when they write to this column retrospectively, taking an accounting of their gain or loss, psychologically, after putting up with philandering for, say, 10 or 15 or 20 years, usually they are more bitter than philosophic about their story; and usually they express regret that they didn't force the issue and leave the offender when he first was untrue. Looking back, they call their attempts at accommodation a mistake; but given the choice over again in the same conditions, I daresay they would do as they did before.

In my opinion, the theory of cautious accommodation to danger is perfectly sound. But in a situation such as yours, the will-to-accommodate (and thus weather the storm if possible) must be wholehearted. It must be undertaken by the wife primarily because she really loves her husband for himself (and realizes that she does); and not because she feels obliged to cling to him parasitically as a source of protection and support. It is this latter, negative type of clinging that breeds bitterness in the exchange, and makes the house of marriage as cheerless as a sepulcher even though the roof still stands.

Virginia, Maryland to Welcome Visitors

Historic Homes Ready for Spring Tours

NEARLY 400 of America's most famous historic homes in South Carolina, Virginia and Maryland are preparing to welcome thousands of visitors this spring for special tour weeks.

Successive dates for sponsored visits in each State provide opportunity for a "progressive tour" beginning at Charleston and moving northward with the blossoms to the Mason-Dixon line.

The Historic Charleston Foundation sponsors its "open house" from March 20 through April 15. The Garden Club of Virginia is holding its seventeenth annual Historic Garden Week in Virginia April 22 through the twenty-ninth and the Federated Garden Clubs of Maryland are sponsoring the thirteenth annual Maryland House and Garden Pilgrimage April 28 through May 9.

Special attraction in each State is that many privately owned estates are open to the public only during the spring-time tour period. Hostesses and guides are provided by local garden clubs and other sponsoring groups.

In Charleston, the 20 private homes included in the 1950 tour span the eighteenth century from 1730 to 1830. These tours are planned to coincide with the peak bloom of Charleston's world famous gardens and with the time of year when the city is at its loveliest, riotous with wistaria and azaleas.

Virginia's State-wide Garden Week offers more than 150 private homes, estates and plantations, in addition to some 100 public shrines and old churches. The Garden Week guide book shows estates in every section, from the Eastern Shore, the Peninsula and the Tidewater, to the Piedmont, Valley and the Southwest.

Special information on the progressive tour can be obtained from three sources — the Historic Charleston Foundation, 94 Church st., Charleston, S. C.; The Garden Club of Virginia, Jefferson Hotel, Richmond, Va., and the Federated Garden Clubs of Maryland, 217 Sheraton-Belvedere Hotel, Baltimore, Md.

General information on Virginia is available from the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce, 111 North Fifth st., Richmond. The Maryland Department of Information, State Office Building, Annapolis, will supply additional information on Maryland.

MUST HOLIDAYS BE TRAFFIC HORROR DAYS?

Your chances of being killed in an auto accident are roughly one and one-half times greater on a holiday than at other times. The Christmas season saw 413 deaths; New Year's, 269—all told 1,500 Americans died in traffic accidents on 14 holidays or holiday weekends. For tips on turning the horror in holidays to happiness see "Let's Stop H-Day Murder!" Sunday in Parade.

Pearl Necklace Remains The Popular Costume

For the last two or three years there has been a definite trend to what I call "costume" pearl necklaces—pearl beads strung in elaborate fancy ways to make a necklace look almost like a collar of lace.

Jacques Fath, the Paris dressmaker, designed some beautiful pearl necklaces of this type that were worn by very smart women and envied by almost everyone else.

This spring, however, these fancy costume pearl necklaces will be within reach of all our pocketbooks and I think they will become a really big fad.

Your Baby

Mother Who Avoids 'No' Gets Results

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Every mother knows from her own experience that she is more at ease, and therefore encounters fewer difficulties, with her second than with her first baby. By the time the third or fourth one comes along she has mastered most of the ordinary problems and can really enjoy her children.

Mrs. L. N. M. has learned how to be relaxed and patient with childish behavior and it is paying off well. "I have heard so much about the negativistic periods," she writes. "So I decided to try something I felt was quite unheard of. Our three little girls are in the primary grades, so when my little boy came along everyone said, 'Oh, my, how spoiled he will be!'

"What we have done is never to say no to him—regardless of what he wants or does. But, this does not mean that we let him get away with what is wrong or harmful to him.

Action Is Best

"Action is so much more desirable to a baby than to be told 'no, no, no.' He is nearly 2 now and he never tells me 'no' and is so sweet. He has a strong will but we never have any fuss.

"We may give him a quick spank, if he needs it, and then pick him up and love him and tell him why he was punished.

"We use an affirmative air always and say, 'Let us do it this way,' instead of 'Don't do it that way.'

"Of course, it takes more time and patience than does yelling but it pays off with a more loving, affectionate and better baby. Everyone loves to see us come, instead of hating it.

"I know this course would have helped me with my older children if anyone had told me how to begin with them."

Technique Not New

You have adopted the right tactics and you should pursue them. This is not a new technique, just an unpracticed one. But there are limits even to this, and to avoid the use of "no" entirely is as unrealistic as to overemphasize it and use only that. The boy should have the experience of being prohibited in his activities as he is permitted them. Just don't over-balance the picture, as do too many mothers, by making it all "no" and very little "yes."

DISPLACED persons and European refugees have become an integral part of the Dominican Republic's social and economic life. Many have intermarried. All have become a part of the country's daily life, Senorita Minerva Bernardino, the Dominican Republic's Minister to the U. N., declared Tuesday.

She spoke before the Contemporary Jewish Affairs Committee of the D. C. Section, National Council of Jewish Women.

The U. N. Minister said that the Dominican Republic was the first nation in the Americas to open its doors to Jewish refugees during the Hitler persecutions. She recalled that Jewish immigrants came to her country from Spain as far back as 1492.

Turning from DPs to the status of women in Latin America, the U. N. delegate said that 12 countries had granted equal rights since 1928. She attributed many of their gains to the work of the Inter-American Commission of Women.

Factual 'Malaya' Seems Fictional

By Richard L. Coe

E. MANCHESTER BODDY is a noted West Coast editor and publisher, associated for some years with the Los Angeles Daily News.

In the Capitol's "Malaya," the first shot you get is a letter to him from Franklin D. Roosevelt early in 1942 concerning the great need for rubber in our war effort.

This would lead you to believe that the picture you are to see is a documented, factual account, and such may very well be the case, although the film quickly turns the E. Manchester Boddy of the Roosevelt letter into Publisher John Manchester, played by Lionel Barrymore.

As I say, this story, which Manchester Boddy is credited with having written, doubtless is largely true, but in adapting it, Frank Fenton has had to fit in a tailoring job for such stars as Spencer Tracy, James Stewart, Sydney Greenstreet and John Hodiak, to say nothing of Love, or the physical symbol thereof, without which no industry product would be classed as saleable.

Hence, what is probably fundamentally true, thanks to Mr. Boddy's connection with the matter, assumes overtones of movie fantasy which, in the end, becomes neither one thing nor the other, but mostly a vehicle for familiar characters.

FRIDEY EARLY RUN—COE— Theaters
"MALAYA," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer release, produced by Edwin H. Knopf, directed by Richard Thorpe, screenplay by Frank Fenton. At the Capitol.

THE CAST

Carnahan	Spencer Tracy
John Royer	James Stewart
Luana	Valentina Cortesa
The Dutchman	Sydney Greenstreet
Kellar	John Hodiak
John Manchester	Lionel Barrymore
Romano	Gilbert Roland
Bruno Gruber	Roland Winters
Colonel Genichi Tomura	Richard Loo
Carlos Tassuma	Ian MacDonald
Matisson	Tom Helmore

Stewart plays a newsman who knows the Far East and is convinced that, given unlimited gold and Navy cooperation, he can get valuable rubber for our war effort. To help him he needs Tracy, an adventurer who's landed in the Federal clink because of underhanded dealings. The feds release Tracy and we start out with the pair for Malaya.

Here, it seems to me, the picture is at its best; we watch the shrouded steps which finally take Stewart and Tracy to Jap-held Malaya. This is done purely visually, with the soundtrack explaining their moves. This is a device which makes the most of photography, as opposed to the inherent phoniness of purely staged dramatics.

Exact as may be the reproductions of Malaya itself, there is that unreal air one gets from watching the familiar and expected against an unfamiliar background. Greenstreet has just the sort of role time has given us to expect; not that he is not a splendid performer, but that his role is tailor-fitted. With very little to do except loll about in the background, Miss Cortesa is as eye-catching as she was in that recent Richard Conte melodrama, but, again, her role is stock material.

Now, while life may very well be in reality a series of stock characters and stock situations (though I am by no means so hardened as to admit it), the predictable in a movie is dull. Some efforts are made to be factual in explaining how the hidden rubber was obtained, spirited down the river in sampans and loaded onto Navy ships.

That "Malaya's" heart is in the right place is evident, but in its attitudes it is too set in a mold to be the exciting, gripping tale Mr. Boddy no doubt intended.

THE CAPITOL'S stage bill is headlined by Jan August, whose suave piano style has made him a unique favorite; in person, he is as effortlessly effective as on his best-selling discs . . . The Three Edwards Brothers, balancing muscle men, also make use of the piano, working out at first on the keys, then on its baby grand back in novel style . . . Dolly Dawn, a songstress whose placid style is in welcome contrast to that of some of her more frenetic sisters, goes over to nice applause in her ballads . . . Doris Patts and Mrs. Waterfall are the comedy headliners, making much of material that could stand refurbishing . . . And busy Milt Slosser organizes.

THE NAVY, I remarked earlier this week, hadn't had its glamour night with a preview, but, Warner's reminds me, tain't so: "Task Force" got the big works at the Warner September 28 . . . Which further reminds me how remiss I was in reviewing "Adam's Rib" by stating how long I thought it was since Katharine Hepburn and Spencer Tracy had played together; seems, as at least a score of correspondents pointed out, that I forgot "Sea of Grass" and "State of the Union" . . . Apologies and I hope it won't ever, ever happen again!

THE CHEVERLEY Theater of the Sidney Lust chain will celebrate its third anniversary Saturday with a stage show and a double feature . . . the pictures will be Will Rogers in "David Harum" and Bill Boyd as Hopalong Cassidy in "Hoppy's Holiday" . . . Picked performers from Bladensburg Junior High will compete in a talent show at the matinee, starting at 2:40 . . . The night performance will present a dance revue with a cast from the Maddox School of Dance.

Symphony Gets Total Of $116,483

The National Symphony Orchestra's sustaining fund campaign yesterday reached $116,483, 61 percent of the $190,000 goal.

Samuel Spencer, drive chairman, immediately announced that the campaign, scheduled to close today, will be extended indefinitely.

The drive opened January 10. Two of the units were over the top—Navy with 160 percent and the Anacostia residential unit with 157 percent.

When the chairmen had finished their reports they were informed that Conductors Leopold Stokowski and Ernest Ansermet had just agreed to be guest conductors during the next season.

Jay Carmody, drama editor of the Evening Star, was guest speaker at yesterday's luncheon, the final report luncheon scheduled during the campaign.

Nursing School Dance

'Mechanical Orphans' Pose Problem

Have you ever driven past your neighborhood police precinct and noticed that the same jalopy that was parked outside a week ago was still there, in the same spot? Ever wonder why? Here's the story:

Hardly a day goes by without police picking up an abandoned car someplace in Washington. The law says you mustn't park in one spot for more than 18 consecutive hours—and when the cops notice that an auto hasn't been moved for several days, they get suspicious. Especially if it's an old junker.

First they try to trace the owner. If they can find him, they tell him to move his car; the public streets are not to be used as storage garages.

But if they can't find the owner, they tow the car in to the neighborhood precinct (usually there's no place to park it except on a nearby street) and continue their investigation.

When they're satisfied that the owner cannot be found, they send a report to Inspector Robert C. Pearce, who orders the abandoned car towed to the Police Property Yard on School st. sw. Inspector Pearce makes one more effort to locate the owner; if he fails, the title is cleared and the car becomes the property of the District.

Once or twice each year there's a public auction at which the vehicles are sold. At the last one, 45 cars brought about $1700—an average of less than $40 each.

"Currently," say Inspector Pearce, "we again have about 100 cars on the lot. And as soon as the new license tags become valid, we'll no doubt pick up 20 or 30 more, because each year approximately that many people figure it's not worthwhile to buy new tags for their cars. I guess we'll have to hold another auction in about a month, and clear the lot for more cars."

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

WTOP's Gene Klavan is really good. But he's breaking down my health with that 12:30 to 2 a. m. schedule of his. Can't WTOP find a more reasonable hour for his program?

Jim Wilfong, jr.

Dear Jim:

Station Manager John Hayes searched for 6 months for a clever boy for the late night trick, and finally hired Klavan for that specific purpose.

Audience response was so good that Gene was given a daytime show recently (4 to 5 p. m. Saturday) and Hayes says:

Incidentally, all of Gene's stuff is ad lib. No script. I take my hat off to a man who can be funny without working at it.

SUGGESTION BOX

Eastbound traffic on H st. nw. is no longer forced to turn right at 14th st. because H is now a two-way street between 13th and 14th.

But the metal guard rails that prevent pedestrians from crossing at this intersection are still in place.

Soviet Ahead In Plane Total

By The Associated Press

An American aviation expert said yesterday Russia is ahead of the United States both in aircraft production and in the number of military planes it has in service.

However, said John F. Victory, executive secretary of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics (NACA), this country isn't disturbed by that situation because it feels that it has the better planes.

"We think we still have supremacy in the air," he said, "because of the superior performance and military effectiveness of our aircraft."

Victory said in a prepared speech at the Cosmopolitan Club that neither the United States nor Russia has a practical military plane of supersonic speed. United States planes can go faster than sound now only when unarmed, he said, adding:

"We see ourselves in the position of a runner in a race who knows he is being hard pressed."

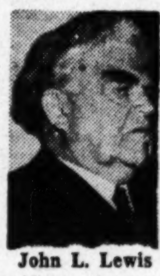
T-H Action Makes Lewis a Hero

By Drew Pearson

IRATE COAL MINERS—Use of the Taft-Hartley Act couldn't have come at a better time for John L. Lewis or at a worse time for the country. For the first time in years there was real revolt against John L. in the coal pits. But not now. Now the Taft-Hartley Act has made him a hero.



John L. Lewis

Miners are suffering from the same factor that hit them before the war—overproduction plus increasing use of gas and oil. But they had been on a short week, had been trying to negotiate—which is what the Taft-Hartley Act provides for Now they're required under a compulsory law to do what they were already willing to do.

TAFT'S MONEY—Republican National Chairman Guy Gabrielson has received a lot of gripes about the money pouring into Sen. Robert Taft's campaign. The complaints come from Republican candidates outside Ohio, who claim they can't raise funds because local fat cats are being touched for Taft's benefit. The Taft crowd is sending out chain letters urging that a Taft defeat would be "a complete surrender to socialism—if not eventual communism.

DOUR BUT EFFICIENT—Senator Scott Lucas of Illinois, who looks as if he were sore at the world, but isn't, is doing a bang-up job as majority leader—though he won't get credit for it. Few majority leaders ever do—until they are promoted upstairs to become Vice President. Even the now beloved Barkley was the object of unceasing brickbats as floor leader. However, Lucas can best be judged by results, and the job he has done of jamming the Truman program through Congress is amazing.

HOPES THE LADY LOSES—California's Representative Dick Nixon, a shrewd and courteous Congressman, has indicated that he hopes a lady loses. The lady is Congresswoman Helen Gahagan Douglas, also of California, who is running against Senator Sheridan Downey in the Democratic senatorial primaries. And the reason Nixon hopes she loses is that he, Nixon, is planning to run for the Senate on the Republican ticket, and Downey would be easier to beat. "Douglas stands for something," Nixon told friends recently, "whereas Downey has been on all sides of almost every issue."

No Religious Bars

Forrest Donnell, the conscientious Missouri Republican, recently killed a discrimination feature in the displaced persons bill. It happened in a closed-door session of the Senate Judiciary Committee, where Donnell listened carefully while Chairman Pat McCarran explained his DP bill in a piping voice.

After reading the formula for admitting displaced persons in proportion to the percent of Americans with similar religious and national origins, McCarran wheezed: "Any questions."

"I object," said Donnell firmly.

McCarran looked as though he had been slapped by his best friend.

"I do not like this religious-proportion thing," spoke up Donnell stoutly. "For 150 years we have had the principle of separation of church and state. Man should be treated as an individual and not as a member of a minority group. He should not be discriminated against because of his religion."

There was a chorus of support from other Senators, and the McCarran formula was knocked out.

Diplomatic Cables

MORE RUSSIAN SUBS—General MacArthur has told the Joint Chiefs of Staff that there soon will be 90 Russian submarines in the Pacific instead of 70. MacArthur reported that the Russians have shipped 20 more subs to North China over the Trans-Siberian Railway. They arrive unassembled and are put together by Russian technicians and workmen at the ports of Vladivostok and Komsomolsk.

SOVIET SPY SCARE—U. S. Ambassador Kirk reports there is a tremendous spy scare in Russia. Hundreds of persons have been arrested in the Ukraine on suspicion of spying for foreigners. Russian workers are being urged by posters, radio broadcasts and special lecture to report anything suspicious to the Soviet NKVD.
